Kent State earned a 24-21 win over the Falcons last season as a 7.5-point home 'dog, despite getting out-gained by nearly 100 yards. Bowling Green built a 21-3 lead midway through the third quarter but the Flashes ended that game on a 21-0 run to steal the victory. Kent State had an extra day to prep for this one after falling at Sacramento State last Friday as a 7.5-point road favorite. No one really knew how the "traditional" MAC schools would handle cross-country travel to the Golden State in the middle of the season, and early returns from both Kent State and Toledo (nearly lost as a 25.5-point favorite) haven't been good. Prior to that quirky trip west, the Flashes beat Akron 35-20 at home. Bowling Green returns home after dropping back-to-back road games at Buffalo and Western Michigan. The Falcons' low-scoring 23-10 loss at WMU broke a string of four-straight "over" results in Bowling Green's games. QB Jay Kastantin is reportedly battling an injury, and he's thrown a total of six interceptions in Bowling Green's last four games. From a bettor's perspective, the MAC has (unquestionably) the worst injury reporting guidelines of any college football league. MAC teams don't have to release an injury report until three hours before kickoff, whereas most other leagues do midweek reports that get updated closer to game time. So we probably won't know Kastantin's status until closer to kickoff, but either way, we have some interest in the under. The Falcons are likely going to rely on their defense in this contest. Kent State has scored an average of 15.0 points per game over the last six weeks.

Western Michigan has won six of the last seven meetings, but these MAC foes have only played one time in the last four seasons - A 34-24 Broncos home win in 2024. Western Michigan had some extra time to prep for this one after beating Bowling Green on Halloween. The Broncos have gotten off to a strong 4-1 start in conference play, but WMU is just 1-6 against the spread over its last seven contests. Akron played quite well and probably deserved a better fate in last Tuesday's 28-20 home loss to Ohio. Akron out-gained Ohio and held a 26-12 advantage in first downs, but couldn't overcome a costly pick-six at the end of the first quarter to put the Zips in an early hole. Akron is still searching for its first win over an FBS-level opponent this season. We understand why there is market sentiment in Akron's favor, but we make this game closer to -17 and we're inclined to lay the points with Western Michigan coming off the bye. The Zips couldn't stay within two touchdowns against Central Michigan, Miami (Oh) or Kent State. Akron's defense has allowed 5.82 yards per rushing attempt, which is the third-worst mark in the country. Western Michigan is producing 165.2 rushing yards per game this season.

Ohio has won-and-covered each of the last two meetings, including a 24-20 home win last season. Both of those Bobcat wins stayed under their respective totals. Both teams are on equal rest after playing last Tuesday. Miami's three-game winning streak was snapped with a 34-31 home loss to Buffalo. Four of the RedHawks' last five games have gone over the total. Ohio is probably fortunate to still have its six-game winning streak intact because the Bobcats were largely out-played as a double-digit favorite against Akron last week. Ohio's offense didn't find the end zone until midway through the third quarter. The Bobcats' entire offense essentially consisted of three plays: A 45-yard interception return for a touchdown, a 60-yard touchdown pass and a 91-yard touchdown run. Ohio's other seven drives produced a total of 179 yards and six of them went scoreless. We're willing to chalk most of that up to the look-ahead spot for this week. Ohio was a two-touchdown favorite last week and you could tell from the opening whistle that the Bobcats weren't giving the Zips much respect. Things should look a bit different in this one. Miami is 1-4 against the spread over the last five games. Only beating UMass by one when the Minutemen were using a back-up QB didn't age very well. Miami needed a game-winning TD with 1:41 left to beat Central Michigan. Miami kicked the game-winning field goal against UConn with three minutes remaining. The RedHawks have been playing with fire recently, and this looks like a spot where they can get burned.

Toledo has won each of the last six meetings, but UMass covered the spread as a double-digit 'dog in each of the last two in 2023 and 2024. The Rockets return home after a closer-than-expected 20-17 road win at Sacramento State last Wednesday. Running backs CJ Miller and Autavius Ison each cleared the 100-yard mark on the ground, but QB John Alan Richter went 9-of-17 for 60 passing yards and an interception against the Hornets. UMass broke a four-game losing skid with a 31-30 home win over Ball State in overtime. The Minutemen have found their spark once again with a healthy QB Pop Watson back under center. Watson threw for over 300 yards on just 25 pass attempts in last week's win over the Cardinals, plus two rushing touchdowns. Early forecasts are calling for potential rain for both this game and Ball State's home game against Buffalo on Wednesday. We have quite a bit of interest in UMass with a two-touchdown head start. As several teams around the country are learning right now, the current college football environment has placed a premium on having a good back-up QB. With all due respect to Aedan McCarthy and Logan Inagawa, the gap between Watson and them is probably worth about ten points in UMass' power rating. The Minutemen are 5-2 with Watson under center, while scoring 30+ points in all five of those wins. It's hard to completely toss two games from a team's resume, but that's essentially what you have to do when looking at the games where Watson was unavailable.

Ball State has covered the spread in each of the last four meetings, but these MAC foes have only met one time in the last four seasons - A 51-48 Bulls win in overtime in November 2024. Buffalo had an extra day to prep for this one after winning at Miami (Oh) last Tuesday. After a shaky start to the season that started 0-4 against the spread, the Bulls have won-and-covered each of their last four games. Buffalo is 4-1 in MAC play with the lone loss coming by a field goal against Western Michigan. Ball State's two-game run was snapped with a 31-30 overtime loss at UMass last week. Even though the Cardinals have now lost three conference games, Ball State has covered the spread in each of its last five contests. Early forecasts are calling for potential rain for both this game and Toledo's home game against UMass on Wednesday. That would likely play into Buffalo's hands and we do have some interest in the Bulls. Ball State QB Keldric Luster is one of the best quarterbacks in the MAC, but if conditions don't allow him to throw, we have some doubts about the Cardinals' rushing attack. Buffalo is running for 167.3 yards per game this season, and veteran head coach Pete Lembo usually has his t's crossed and i's dotted in a game like this.

Not as bad as we thought, or terrible travel spots for the opponents? That's the question that bettors and oddsmakers are asking surrounding Sacramento State this week. After looking like (unquestionably) the worst team in college football through the first eight weeks, the Hornets have covered the spread by 28.5 and 22.5 points over the last two weeks against Kent State and Toledo. The easy thing would be to dismiss those results as bad travel spots for the Flashes and Rockets, but UMass won 35-6 at Sacramento State and Ohio won 48-7 so those schools didn't have any trouble earlier this season. Central Michigan snapped its three-game losing skid with a 35-7 win over Eastern Michigan at Ford Field in Detroit. The Eagles were forced to use a back-up QB in that contest, and the Chippewas took full advantage. Assuming this point spread stays above 17, this will be the most points Central Michigan has been favored by against an FBS-level opponent since the Chipps closed as a 17-point favorite at Kent State in 2017. For what it's worth, Central closed as an 18.5-point home favorite over FCS-level Colgate in Week 2 and only won 13-10. It certainly isn't our favorite play on this week's slate, but we can only look in Sacramento State's direction.

Memphis has won eight of the last nine meetings, including an outright upset as a home 'dog last season. South Florida went to the Liberty Bowl as a 3.5-point road favorite, but the Tigers ended the game on a 17-0 run to steal the victory despite getting out-gained by 114 yards. Memphis is coming off its bye week, so the Tigers had plenty of time to prep for this one. Memphis has won five of its last six games, with the lone loss against Tulane looking worse and worse by the week. Since beating the Tigers last month, the Green Wave lost by 23 at home to UTSA, lost by 50 (yes, 50) at home to Tulsa and needed overtime to beat 1-8 Charlotte. Things aren't much better on the South Florida side where Brian Hartline can't get anything going on offense. The Bulls lost 20-17 at East Carolina last week while going 1-for-10 on third down. Five of South Florida's last six games have stayed under the total. During that stretch, the Bulls have scored an average of 21.2 points per game against a schedule that includes Bowling Green, Temple, Kent State and UAB. With that being said, we still have some interest in backing the Bulls as a home 'dog. Seeing his first notable playing time in nearly two seasons, back-up QB Luke Kromenhoek was solid but not spectacular in last week's trek to East Carolina. We'll see if Coach Hartline sticks with the Florida State transfer or goes back to original starter Michael Van Buren Jr., but either way, we believe South Florida's defense is good enough to keep the Bulls within the number. And let's not forget, Memphis head coach Charles Huff isn't shy about letting his eyes wander. Memphis is Huff's third school in three years, and a quick Google search already has his name attached to a few jobs. We don't THINK Huff will be on the move, but his Southern Miss team went 0-4 straight-up and against the spread down the stretch at the end of last season when it was clear that Huff was only going to be spending one year in Hattiesburg. We wouldn't be completely shocked if the Tigers hit a similar downturn in 2026 if Huff's name continues to swirl.

Louisiana has won seven of the last eight meetings, but the WarHawks from Monroe pushed the Ragin' Cajuns to overtime last year as a double-digit 'dog. Monroe out-gained Louisiana by nearly 200 yards in that contest, but the Cajuns returned the opening kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown and the WarHawks turned the ball over twice. Both teams are on equal rest after playing on Saturday. Louisiana has bounced back-and-forth between wins and losses over its last five games, falling at Southern Miss before beating South Alabama at home last week. Monroe is playing some of its best football of the season right now, beating Troy as a 13.5-point road 'dog before winning at Arkansas State as a 14.5-point 'dog. Heck, even a 24-0 loss to Louisiana Tech doesn't look THAT bad considering the Bulldogs are 8-1 against the spread this season and just crushed Troy last week. Some early money has shown on the over in this contest, and we agree with it. Monroe was able to generate 516 total yards against the Ragin' Cajuns defense last year. The WarHawks have started to use a two-QB system with both Austin Carlisle and Aidan Armenta seeing significant playing time last week against Arkansas State. Carlisle finished with the hot hand, producing 111 rushing yards on 19 attempts against the Red Wolves. The last three meetings between these teams have produced an average of 63.3 points per game. And given the nature of this rivalry, we expect both coaching staffs to have a trick play or two up their sleeve that they have been saving for this one.

Home field advantage hasn't meant very much in this ACC matchup as the road team has won each of the last four meetings. Florida State earned a 24-7 road win at Pitt in 2023 and the Panthers returned the favor with a 34-31 win in Tallahassee last season as a double-digit 'dog. Pitt is coming off its bye week after previously earning a 34-11 home win over Georgia Tech. Considering the Yellow Jackets have lost each of their last three games by 21+ points, it's tough to give the Panthers too much credit for that result. We made a recommendation on the under in Florida State's game against Boston College last week, and although that final score crept over the total, that is a bet that we would make again (and will do so this week). Our handicap in that game revolved around interim head coach Rick Stockstill getting the Seminoles back to the basics with limited mistakes, and that's exactly what he did. QB Ashton Daniels was only needed for 15 completions as Florida State ran the ball 45 times for 202 yards. Turnovers and special teams routinely gave both teams short fields, which is why we ended up with 55 points when the final whistle blew. Boston College kicked a field goal on a drive that started at the FSU 43. Florida State's first touchdown came on a possession that started at the BC 27. Boston College scored off an interception at midfield, and the Seminoles scored a touchdown on a successful fake field goal. If it took all of that to score 55 points in Chestnut Hill last Saturday, then we're comfortable going right back to the well with another under. As we get our write-ups together on Monday, forecasts for this late-week Nor'Easter are still a little unclear, but there is potential for some nasty weather in this contest. Look for Coach Stockstill to install another safe, conservative gameplan against a Panthers' team that we're not particularly high on.

This will be the first meeting between the Bruins and Illini as members of the Big Ten. The last meeting between UCLA and Illinois took place on New Years Eve 2011 in the Kraft Fight Hunger Bowl at Oracle Park in San Francisco. UCLA is still a perfect 9-0 straight-up and against the spread following last week's 34-20 road win at Minnesota. Wide receiver Aidan Mizell was the only Bruin to catch multiple passes in that contest, and he made his two opportunities count. Mizell scored on a pair of 75-yard receptions in the fourth quarter as UCLA pulled away from the Gophers in the final minutes. UCLA's previous four games had all stayed under the total, and it looked like we were potentially heading toward another one in Minneapolis before QB Ty Dieffenbach and Mizell found their chemistry. Illinois is 4-0 straight-up, 3-1 against the spread over the last four games including a pair of outright upset wins over Oregon and Nebraska. Just like UCLA, four of Illinois' last five games have stayed under the total. We respect everything that Bob Chesney and the Bruins have accomplished thus far, but we're struggling to justify a double-digit spread in this matchup. Illinois essentially has one bad result on its profile this season: A 24-17 home loss to Purdue. An early-season loss to Duke looks perfectly fine at the moment considering the Blue Devils are 7-2 straight-up and against the spread this season and have won their last two games by a combined score of 88-5. UCLA had an early-season bye at the beginning of October, so this is the Bruins' sixth-straight week with a game. With a College Football Playoff berth within reach and a possible Big Ten Championship Game appearance on the docket, this season has become a marathon in Westwood, not a sprint. UCLA doesn't need style points.

Though the Broncos continue to take up much of the sports oxygen along the Front Range, Deion Sanders' plight in Boulder isn't being ignored, either, with job status now inevitably among the questions asked to Coach Prime during any presser. For what it's worth, our sources in the region still believe it's more likely for Sanders to walk on his own accord rather than for Buffs AD Fernando Lovo to hit the eject button...for now, at least as long as Colorado looks to be competing hard for Deion. That seems to be the case, finally breaking a year-long Big XII slump two weeks ago by beating Kansas State in OT and then battling in the second half last week at Arizona State, coming to life after a lackluster first half while shutting down the Sun Devils in the final 30 minutes while finding a rhythm on offense behind QB Isaac Wilson. Indeed, Deion's switch last month to ex-Ute Wilson at QB has lent a bit sharper edge to the offense with Wilson unafraid to get the ball downfield, though an ongoing issue has been a sporadic infantry that hasn't slowed opposing defenses from getting to Wilson, who among other things last week took four sacks, one of those a 24-yard loss on a fourth down play inside of Sun Devil territory in the second quarter. Ending Houston's longshot hopes of a Big XII title game berth and a shot at the playoffs might be asking a bit much, but we also have reason to be a bit skittish about laying points with the Cougs, who have turned into a low-variance side this season while failing to cover all five chances as chalk vs. FBS-level opposition. The latest example of such came last week, when Willie Fritz and his troops found themselves in a scrap with underdog Cincinnati and level at home late in the fourth quarter until RB Re'Shaun Sanford II broke a 51-yard scoring run to pull out a 31-24 win...but no cover. Illustrative of the Houston pattern this season, QB Conner Weigman has posted the sort of stat line (22 TD passes and just two picks, along with seven rush TDs) that might at least get him back to the Downtown Athletic Club in December for the Heisman ceremony, but it usually hasn't been enough for the Cougs to extend margins over the horizon. By this point of the season, that's baked into Houston's personality, and remember that Coach Prime did summon a big effort from his troops vs. unbeaten Utah a few weeks ago. There are other favorites we simply might rather back this weekend than the Cougs.

Each team has protected its home turf the past two seasons. Iowa State earned a 34-17 home win over the Bearcats in November 2024, and Cincinnati returned the favor with a 38-30 win at Nippert Stadium last year. Iowa State is 1-3 straight-up and against the spread over the last four games following last week's 42-31 loss at Baylor. The Cyclones' defense has been nowhere to be found in recent weeks as Iowa State allowed 42 points to West Virginia, 39 points to Arizona, 49 points to Oklahoma State and 42 points last week to the Bears. Cincinnati is no stranger to a shootout as the over is 6-2 in the Bearcats' last eight games. Cincinnati is on the second leg of a road back-to-back following last week's 31-24 loss at Houston. The Bearcats have allowed an average of 34.8 points per game in Big XII action thus far. Bearcats running back Cole Tabb and wide receiver JV Gibson are both listed as questionable after both suffered injuries in last week's loss to Houston. Gibson has 515 receiving yards this season with four touchdowns, while Tabb is averaging 8.9 yards per carry (not a typo) this season with ten touchdowns. Long-term injuries to either of those players would likely be felt by the Bearcats' offense. Cincinnati's rushing defense has allowed an average of 4.78 yards per carry this season, which ranks outside the top-110 in the country. Iowa State can probably handle business with a ground-heavy approach that controls the clock and keeps the ball away from the Bearcats' offense. Holding Utah to 31 points in Week 4 is actually aging pretty well for the Cyclones considering Utah just scored 49 points at Cincinnati on Halloween.

This will be the first meeting between the Tigers and Bulldogs since Auburn's 27-13 home win in October 2023. Mississippi State is 0-5 straight-up and against the spread following last week's home loss to Vanderbilt. During this five-game losing skid, Mississippi State has scored an average of 12.8 points per game as the Bulldogs struggle to replace the production of injured QB Kamario Taylor. Five of the Bulldogs' last six games have stayed under the total. Auburn snapped a two-game losing skid with a 26-23 home win over Arkansas. Despite the victory, the Tigers are just 1-6 against the spread over their last seven games. Backing the Bulldogs hasn't been much fun in recent weeks, but we're inclined to give Mississippi State a shot. Hail State plays FCS-level Tennessee Tech next week (we're going to pencil in a win), so Mississippi State needs to win this game to become bowl eligible. After such a strong start to the season, you have to imagine that Jeff Lebby can keep his team motivated with that carrot. AJ Swann isn't going to be able to replicate what Taylor did for this offense, but he provides a veteran presence that can make enough necessary plays to get the Bulldogs across this finish line. Running back Fluff Bothwell caught five passes last week against Vanderbilt, so Lebby is looking for creative ways to get the ball in his hands. Auburn can hang its hat on the upset win at Georgia, but the Tigers are 0-3 against the spread in their other three games away from home this season.

James Madison won the lone meeting at the FBS level 44-6 in November 2023. UConn has dropped back-to-back games against Air Force and North Carolina. The Tar Heels opened last week's contest with a 62-yard pick-six in the first quarter and UNC had a firm grip on the game the rest of the way. The Huskies' defense was tasked with stopping a total of 110 rushing attempts between the Falcons and Tar Heels over the last two weeks. James Madison has a couple extra days to prep for this one after winning at Southern Miss last Thursday. The Dukes still haven't had their bye (it's next week), so this will be James Madison's 11th-straight week with a game. Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. We played against UConn last week and we're prepared to go back to the same well. The Huskies' defense was on the field for nearly 42 minutes against Air Force in Colorado Springs two weeks ago, then North Carolina enjoyed over 36 minutes of possession last week. That kind of attrition compounds week after week. Bill Belichick certainly doesn't have the fastest, most-explosive roster in Chapel Hill, but he knows what to look for in the trenches. You've got a UConn roster that features plenty of MAC-level Toledo carry-overs from head coach Jason Candle trying to navigate an independent schedule that features a wide range of opponents. Any time the Huskies have been asked to compete with a physical opponent - Maryland, Syracuse, Air Force and North Carolina - UConn has come up short.

Each team has protected its home turf over the past two seasons. West Virginia earned a 32-28 win in Morgantown in 2024 and the Jayhawks returned the favor with a 41-10 home win in Lawrence last season. That relatively-low-scoring result broke a string of four-straight "over" results between the Mountaineers and Jayhawks. West Virginia returns home after falling at Texas Tech last week, but the 'Neers did stay within the number as a double-digit 'dog for their third-straight point spread cover. The over is 8-1 in West Virginia's games this season. Kansas is 1-4 straight-up and against the spread over its last five games following last week's 33-32 home loss to UCF. Neither of these teams are very trustworthy, but at least on the West Virginia side you know you're going to get a quality performance from the Mountaineers' offense. Is there any one unit or area where the Jayhawks are reliable on a week-to-week basis? Kansas' only conference win came by one point against a Baylor team that fired its head coach. The Jayhawks need to win their last three games to become bowl eligible, but with BYU and Oklahoma State still on the schedule, that outlook is grim. Last week's one-point loss to the Knights may have been the straw that breaks the Jayhawks' back in 2026. And when you have a team that may not be 100-percent motivated, a Rich Rodriguez rushing attack is not something you want to see on the horizon.

Ohio State has won each of the last 11 meetings in this Big Ten matchup, with the last one being a 31-7 road win in Evanston in November 2024. Each of the last three meetings between the Buckeyes and Wildcats have stayed under the total. Ohio State is looking to snap a two-game losing skid to preserve any slim chance of reaching the College Football Playoff. Head Coach Ryan Day announced that Luke Fahey will remain the Buckeyes' starter this week, and Fahey has largely been fine in his relief of Julian Sayin. Ohio State produced a 75-yard and 82-yard scoring drive in the first quarter against Oregon last week, but the Buckeyes' defense couldn't stop Dylan Raiola on the other side. Ohio State's QB situation seems to be relatively stable at the moment, but Chip Kelly wishes he could say the same on the other side. QB Aidan Chiles was unable to play in last week's home loss to Iowa, and the drop-off to back-up Nicco Marchiol was notable. Northwestern didn't find the end zone against the Hawkeyes until the two-minute warning in the fourth quarter. While nothing official has come out of Ryan Field in recent days, early reports suggest Chiles will not be ready to return for this one. If that's the case, we're comfortable laying this number with the Buckeyes. Kelly has done wonders with the Wildcats' offense this season, but Marchiol's limitations are evident. Knowing that he needs to stay in the good graces of those in Columbus, if there's an opportunity to score a confidence-boosting touchdown late in this contest, Coach Day is likely going to take it.

Maryland earned a 27-10 road win in Madison last September as a 10.5-point 'dog. That result caused quite a stir among the Badger faithful last season, and the Terps have the potential to give Wisconsin head coach Luke Fickell some more headaches this week. Maryland snapped its six-game losing skid with a 34-29 road win at Purdue last week. Six of the Terps' last seven games have gone over the total. Wisconsin earned a much-needed bounce-back win over Rutgers last week after getting shut-out by Iowa the week before. Fickell announced that he's handing the reins to true freshman QB Ryan Hopkins, who has seen his first significant action over the past two weeks against Iowa and Rutgers. Previous starter Colton Joseph may continue to see the field in special packages, but he did not play in last week's 31-10 win over the Scarlet Knights. Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. Hopkins had the element of unfamiliarity on his side last week against Rutgers, but Maryland (and upcoming Purdue and Minnesota) now has tape on the Badgers' young quarterback. Making your first road start in College Park is a pretty soft landing spot, but nonetheless, oddsmakers are asking a true freshman to win his first road game against a conference opponent by more than a touchdown. We can't get on board with that one.

UAB won the lone meeting between these American Conference foes with a 34-24 home victory in 2023. Temple was involved in one of the wildest under-the-radar results last week against Navy. The Owls fell behind 28-0 in the second quarter but fought all the way back to tie the game before eventually losing in the final minute. Temple scored 35 points in a game where they had 19 minutes of possession and nine first downs. UAB needs one more win to reach bowl eligibility, and this would be the spot to get it. The Blazers end the year with games against UTSA and North Texas, so this clash with Temple represents the best chance to reach that sixth win. With a regular season win total of 3.5 entering the year, Alex Mortensen's team has already exceeded expectations. It certainly wasn't pretty, but UAB earned a 23-13 home win over Charlotte last week. The Blazers' defense held the 49ers to 234 total yards and ten first downs. Charlotte didn't score its first touchdown until there was one minute remaining in garbage time. While this game isn't expected to see quite the same wind effects as some others this weekend, there is still the potential for gusts of 25+ miles per hour after the Nor'Easter passes through the Mid-Atlantic. Temple has been competitive all season for KC Keeler, but at some point, the Owls need to turn those strong showings into actual wins. Temple has one win over an FBS-level opponent this season. Until the cherry-and-white get over that hump, they're not giving us much reason to back them at the betting window. That potential sixth win can be a big motivational chip for Mortensen's Blazers.

Penn State has won each of the last two meetings, but Minnesota nearly pulled the outright upset in 2024 as a 12.5-point 'dog, eventually falling 26-25. The Nittany Lions have gotten things back on track with back-to-back wins over Purdue and Washington. From a power ratings perspective, we're having a really tough time justifying Penn State as this big of a home favorite against a Minnesota program that is historically very strong as an underdog. The Gophers are 4-2 against the spread as an underdog with three outright upset wins this season. The argument against Minnesota this week is that the Gophers may be running out of gas at the end of a gauntlet. Since coming out of the bye in mid-October, the Gophers played a nail-biter against Iowa (upset win), took the defending national champs from Indiana to overtime then lost a heartbreaker at home against UCLA last week. How much will they have left in the tank for a night game in Happy Valley? Rocco Becht and the Nittany Lions' offense have found an explosive spark over the last couple weeks, and that's the last thing PJ Fleck wants to hear right now. Minnesota's defense forced UCLA QB Ty Dieffenbach to go 8-of-16 through the air last week. So how did the Gophers lose?! Those eight completions went for an average of 37.9 yards per play. Dieffenbach connected with receiver Aidan Mizell for a pair of 75-yard touchdowns in the fourth quarter. Becht didn't have quite that same explosiveness in last week's win in Seattle, but wide receivers Chase Sowell and Zay Robinson give Penn State a similar deep threat that troubled Minnesota last week. With remaining games against Rutgers and Penn State, first-year head coach Matt Campbell can sell a season-ending five-game winning streak to his roster with the potential to still go to a prominent bowl game.

After Vanderbilt earned a 40-35 outright upset win as a three-touchdown underdog in 2024, the Crimson Tide returned earth to its proper axis with a 30-14 home win over the Commodores last season. Vanderbilt broke its five-game losing skid with a 25-23 road win at Mississippi State last week. Vandy led 16-0 at halftime, but needed to stop the potential game-tying two-point conversion with under a minute remaining. After throwing eight interceptions over his previous five starts, freshman QB Jared Curtis played a clean game in last week's win over the Bulldogs. Alabama remains firmly in the College Football Playoff discussion after last week's 31-13 win at LSU. That final score was probably a little flattering for the Crimson Tide, but nonetheless, any win in Baton Rouge is a good win. Alabama QB Keelon Russell is reportedly dealing with a lingering ankle injury. During his Monday press conference, head coach Kalen DeBoer said, "I'd expect him to do everything he can to get on the football field" and Russell did return to practice on Tuesday. Crimson Tide tight end Josh Ford will miss the rest of the season with a knee injury. Ford caught a touchdown pass in last week's win over LSU. This is a big number to lay, but ultimately we find ourselves on the side of the Crimson Tide. Vanderbilt's Clark Lea has been fantastic as an underdog through out his career, but his formula is built on sound defense and a slow pace. That formula hasn't worked very well this season as the 'Dores allowed 31 points to NC State, 38 points to Georgia, 52 points to Ole Miss, 31 points to Arkansas and 34 points to Kentucky. Alabama has no incentive to run up the score, but at the same time, the Crimson Tide play FCS-level Chattanooga next week so there's no look-ahead spot to worry about. Curtis is still learning on the job, which is concerning against the Crimson Tide defense.

Miami earned a 53-31 home win over the Blue Devils in their last meeting in November 2024. The 'Canes are licking their wounds after suffering their first loss of the season at Notre Dame last week. Miami was dealt a surprising blow in the middle of last week when star receiver Malachi Toney was ruled out with an ankle injury. Toney is expected to miss the rest of the regular season, but has a chance to return for the postseason depending on where the 'Canes land. Perhaps the most-concerning stat from last week's loss was that Miami failed to generate a single sack against Irish QB CJ Carr, who attempted 40 passes in that contest. Carr is a very talented quarterback, but for the amount of money that Miami spent on its roster this season, allowing Carr to go 29-of-40 with 319 yards, three touchdowns with no interceptions or sacks is troubling. Considering Duke has won its last two conference games by a combined margin of 88-5, the Hurricanes better erase the bad memories of last week's defeat. Duke's last four games have all stayed under the total, and the Blue Devils have the formula to keep Miami's high-powered offense off the field. Nate Sheppard is one of the best running backs in the country and he ran for 217 yards against NC State last week. In his Monday press conference, Duke head coach Manny Diaz said Sheppard deserves more attention in the Heisman race, and a strong performance over the 'Canes on Saturday can help make that happen.

Georgia Southern has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings. Interestingly, all three of those wins came by the exact same 17-point margin. Georgia State snapped its three-game losing skid (both straight-up and ATS) with a 39-23 road win at App State last week. The Panthers played their second-straight game without starting QB Cameran Brown, but the defense did most of the work against the Mountaineers. A 23-yard pick-six gave Georgia State the lead in the second quarter and Georgia State finished that contest with 265 rushing yards. Georgia Southern is a half-point away from being a perfect 9-0 at the betting window this season. The Eagles have covered the spread in each of their last six games, and the lone loss came by four points at Jacksonville State when Georgia Southern closed as a 3.5-point 'dog. The Eagles earned a 49-13 home win over Marshall last week. Four of Georgia State's last five games have gone over the total, and that is the direction we're going to look in this one. Five of the last six meetings in this rivalry have gone over the total as those six games have seen an average of 59.7 points per game. Georgia State's current offense is significantly better than most of those Panther outfits from the past. Brown's potential return to the Georgia State huddle would be a nice cherry on top.

The home team has won all six installments of this series since the Mountaineers and Herd joined the Sun Belt. Marshall earned a 52-37 win as a short home favorite in 2024 and the Mountaineers returned the favor with a 26-24 home win last season. App State was out-gained by 162 yards, but Marshall lost the turnover battle 3-0. Marshall returns home after splitting a pair of road games at Old Dominion (win) and Georgia Southern (loss). App State is looking to snap a two-game losing skid after the Mountaineers were swept by Georgia State and Georgia Southern. We were high on App State's offense at the beginning of the season. Highly-touted QB Malachi Singleton developed a nice rhythm with offensive-minded head coach Dowell Loggains, but as soon as the rest of the Sun Belt got some tape on this duo, Singleton began to struggle. App State's last four wins have come by 3, 3, 5 and 3 points. The Mountaineers were playing with fire earlier, and now they are starting to get burned. Huntington is a tough place to play, and as we already established, home field advantage has meant quite a bit in this series.

Charlotte has covered the spread in all three meetings since these Tar Heel State foes joined The American Conference. The 49ers earned outright upset wins in 2023 and 2024 before falling last season, but still stayed within the lofty spread. Charlotte has enjoyed a little bit of a resurgence in recent weeks thanks to some strong QB play from Conner Harrell, who either missed or was limited in the 49ers' first five games. Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. That's likely going to impact Harrell and the 49ers' passing attack more than ECU. Since getting the full seal of approval last month, Harrell had 31+ pass attempts in each of Charlotte's last three games. If he can't pass in those potentially-difficult conditions, the Pirates are better-equipped to win an ugly one. Seven of ECU's last eight games have stayed under the total. Each of the last two vs Temple and South Florida failed to crack 40 points. East Carolina plays Army next week, so an ugly slog in bad conditions might actually help the Pirates prepare for the Knights next week.

Has it really been that long?! Louisville and North Carolina have met one time in the last 13 seasons - The Cardinals' 47-35 road win in Chapel Hill in September 2017. Each of the last three meetings have gone down to the wire (even though they were a LONG time ago), so we certainly wouldn't mind if the Cardinals and Tar Heels got together a little more often. Louisville is riding a four-game winning streak after last week's demolition of Georgia Tech. The Cardinals have won those four contests by an average of 21.3 points per game. The over is 7-2 in Louisville's games this season, and both games that stayed under the total only did so by two points in each game. North Carolina got back in the win column last week with a 38-21 road win at UConn. Several pundits had that game circled as a let-down spot for the Tar Heels, but when you're talking about a Bill Belichick-coached team, letdown spots aren't in the dictionary. Belichick certainly doesn't want to make excuses, but the fact remains that he was quite close to engineering a special season in Chapel Hill. All four of UNC's losses went down to the wire, including a one-point home loss to Syracuse and a three-point home loss to Miami (Fla). The strength of schedule disparity in this one is hard to ignore. Per Sagarin, North Carolina has played a top-20 schedule while Louisville's slate is outside the top-50. Normally, that would point us in the direction of the battle-tested Tar Heels, but we're taking a different approach. At this point of the season, rest and injuries matter. Both of North Carolina's bye weeks were in September, so this will be the Heels' seventh-straight week with a game and we just outlined the gauntlet that they played. Louisville just had its bye three weeks ago and the Cardinals haven't broken a sweat over the last two weeks. Louisville is the fresher team and Jeff Brohm has probably kept a couple things in his playbook for this game.

The home team has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings, including Troy's 31-24 overtime win last season. Five of the last seven meetings have stayed under the total as the Trojans' defense has done a very nice job against the Jaguars' high-flying offense. South Alabama is looking to snap a three-game losing skid, which includes a 28-26 loss at Louisiana last week. After scoring an average of 38.8 points per game across their first six games, the Jaguars have been held to 19.7 points during this three-game losing streak. Troy continues to be one of the most Jekyll and Hyde teams in the country. One week after upsetting James Madison as a 17.5-point road 'dog, the Trojans lost by 24 at home to Louisiana Tech last week. Seven of Troy's nine games have stayed under the total. Neither team is particularly trustworthy at the moment, but this is a kitchen sink game for both teams. Both squads are 4-5, and a win would go a long way toward securing bowl eligibility with two games remaining. Even though each team is trending in a low-scoring direction, when they find the right dance partner, magic tends to happen. South Alabama has played four games with 65+ points this season. Things haven't clicked over the last three weeks against quality opponents, but a visit from Troy can bring some different fortunes.

Clemson was on a nine-game winning streak in this ACC matchup before Georgia Tech earned a 24-21 home win over the Tigers last season. Clemson out-gained the Yellow Jackets in that contest, but Georgia Tech made the game-winning 55-yard field goal as time expired. Clemson returns home after back-to-back road wins at Florida State and Syracuse. Georgia Tech is 0-4 straight-up and against the spread over its last four games, and the Yellow Jackets' 28-25 home win over Duke is looking like one of the more-confusing results of the season. Georgia Tech head coach Brent Key wasn't interested in waiting until the offseason to make significant changes. On Monday, the Yellow Jackets fired defensive coordinator Jason Semore, defensive ends coach Kyle Pope, offensive line coach Allen Mogridge and wide receivers coach Jafar Williams. In our opinion, that's a troubling sign for the Yellow Jackets the rest of the way. With two games remaining against Wake Forest and Georgia, Key's moves tell us he's already turned the page to 2027. Indiana transfer Alberto Mendoza hasn't brought much to the Ramblin' Wreck, and it appears that there will be a lot of empty lockers and offices in Atlanta in the coming weeks.

Game of the day?! It's certainly possible. Wake Forest earned a 13-12 home win over the Mustangs last season, but it's safe to say we're expecting to see a few more points in this one. Wake Forest is 8-1 straight-up, 7-2 against the spread this season with the lone loss coming by a touchdown to former-No. 1 Miami. The Deacs have won their last five games against Stanford, NC State, Cal, Virginia and FCS-level Merrimack by a combined margin of 264-31. If you're looking to poke holes in Wake Forest's schedule, well, SMU's is worse. Per Sagarin, the Mustangs have played the No. 69 schedule in the country thus far. Much like Wake, SMU has handled business in a professional manner thus far. We're viewing this game very similar to Louisville's contest with North Carolina. Wake Forest just had a bye three weeks ago and the Deacs got past Virginia and Merrimack without breaking a sweat. Normally, that weak strength of schedule would be viewed as a knock. But in the year 2026 where health, rest and travel all add up, we'll take the team that's probably been preparing for this game for the last two weeks. Yes, SMU was dominant against Virginia Tech last week. But the bumps and bruises you accumulate while playing the Hokies feel a lot different than the ones you get when playing Merrimack.

Syracuse has won-and-covered each of the last two meetings, with the last one being a 24-17 road win in Raleigh in 2024. Much like conference mate Georgia Tech, NC State looks ready to turn the page to 2027. The Wolfpack have seemingly targeted Philip Rivers to be the next head coach, although an official announcement has not been made. NC State lost 41-3 at home against Duke last week. The Blue Devils out-gained the Wolfpack 461-217 with a +2.7 yards per play differential. Duke held a 31-3 lead at halftime. The Wolfpack still have a half-decent chance to reach a bowl game, but after that effort last week, it doesn't appear that NC State is particularly interested. Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. Syracuse suffered a disappointing 18-13 home loss to Clemson last week, but the Orange still played well in that contest. Syracuse out-gained Clemson, but a missed field goal and a 22-yard fumble return for a touchdown ultimately sealed the deal. Running back Ahmad Miller has rushed for 100+ yards in three of Syracuse's last four games. If the weather is bad in this one and each team is limited in the passing game, we trust the Orange duo of Miller and Steve Angeli to deliver.

Iowa has won-and-covered each of the last two meetings, but these regional foes haven't met since 2023. The Hawkeyes have won-and-covered each of their last two games with a pair of dominant wins over Wisconsin and Northwestern. Iowa was fortunate to catch the 'Cats with a back-up QB last week after starter Aidan Chiles was ruled out. To no one's surprise, five of the Hawkeyes' last six games have stayed under the total. Purdue is looking to snap a three-game losing skid after last week's home loss to Maryland. The Boilermakers fired defensive coordinator Kevin Kane after that result. Purdue's defense has allowed an average of 34.3 points per game over the last three contests. The Terps were one of our favorite plays last week because of the attrition that Purdue faced the prior week at Penn State. But now that those results are out of their system and the coaching staff has done a shuffle, we're expecting to see a different Boilermakers team in this one. The only team to beat Purdue by more than two touchdowns this season is Notre Dame. Wake Forest couldn't do it. UCLA couldn't do it. Washington couldn't do it. Penn State couldn't do it. Is Iowa the team that's going to open up a three-score margin against the Boilermakers?! We have our doubts.

Washington has won-and-covered each of the last two meetings in 2022 and 2023. Michigan State snapped its six-game losing streak with a 15-6 win over Michigan in Ann Arbor. Sparty stole that contest without scoring a touchdown as place kicker Liam Boyd went 5-for-5 in a tough environment. Starting QB Alessio Milivojevic returned last week after missing the previous contest against UCLA with an injury. Seven of the Spartans' last eight games have stayed under the total. Washington's two-game uptick came to a close last week in a three-point home loss to Penn State, with a final score that is probably a little flattering for the Huskies because the Nittany Lions were in control for most of that contest. QB Demond Williams is expected to remain the starter this week after producing some solid, but not spectacular, numbers in last week's loss. Penn State was able to attack the Huskies through the air, and even though Milivojevic does bring a spark to the Spartans' attack, Michigan State can't replicate that kind of passing success against Washington. Look for Pat Fitzgerald to make this as ugly as possible, once again.

Nebraska has won all five meetings since these teams joined the Big Ten, with the last one being a 14-7 home win in October 2024. Each of the last five meetings have stayed under the total. The Huskers have lost their last four games, including a 24-13 loss at Illinois last week. Six of Nebraska's last seven games have stayed under the total. Rutgers is looking to snap a three-game losing skid. The Scarlet Knights were at a little bit of a disadvantage last week at Wisconsin as the Badgers made a somewhat-surprising QB change to a relatively unknown freshman. Rutgers wasn't prepared for that one and the Knights' defense allowed Ryan Hopkins to throw for 241 yards and three touchdowns in his first start. With only two wins on the season, Rutgers is ready to wave the white flag on this campaign. Starting QB Dylan Lonergan suffered a concussion two weeks ago and his status for the rest of the year is in doubt. Back-up AJ Surace has failed to produce any kind of spark. While this game isn't expected to see quite the same wind effects as some others this weekend, there is still the potential for gusts of 25+ miles per hour after the Nor'Easter passes through the Mid-Atlantic. If passing opportunities are limited, can the Huskers build enough of a margin to cover this lofty number? We have our doubts.

Coastal Carolina has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings, but this is the first contest between the RedWolves and Chanticleers since 2023. Both teams suffered tough losses last week. Coastal lost as a 6.5-point home favorite against Old Dominion, while Arkansas State lost as a 14.5-point home favorite against UL-Monroe. The Chanticleers return to familiar territory this week in near-pick'em territory, because we felt pretty strongly that Coastal wasn't going to look comfortable as a touchdown favorite last week against the Monarchs. Playing as an underdog for six-straight weeks then being asked to win by margin rarely works out, and that was the case in Conway last weekend. We have some mild interest in the over in this contest. Prior to last week's hiccup against Old Dominion, the Chanticleers' previous five contests saw an average of 54.4 points per game. UL-Monroe ran for 268 yards against the RedWolves' defense last week. That looks like a pretty nice blueprint for Coastal to follow. Arkansas State's offense is probably a little better than its numbers would indicate, as long as QB Trey Owens isn't throwing multiple interceptions like he did last week.

UTSA was on a four-game winning streak in this Lone Star State matchup before North Texas earned a 55-17 home win last season. The Mean Green out-gained the RoadRunners by over 250 yards in that contest. UTSA had a couple extra days to prep for this one after Meep Meep was crushed at Florida Atlantic last week. UTSA was riding a five-game winning streak before the RoadRunners lost 60-29 in Boca as a 7.5-point road favorite. UTSA's last four games have all gone over the total. Last week's contest against the Owls had a closing total of 72.5, which UTSA and Florida Atlantic had cleared 33 minutes into the game. That game was played on the breezy shores of Florida, but now the RoadRunners head home to the fast turf of the Alamo Dome. North Texas has won each of its last six games, including a 52-23 home win over Rice last week. The over has gone 8-1 in North Texas' games this season, and frankly, we don't think this total is high enough either. During this current six-game winning streak, the Mean Green have scored an average of 51.2 points per game. North Texas is No. 2 in the country in yards per play at 7.55, with only Louisville posting a better mark.

Florida Atlantic has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings, including a 40-21 win as a 3.5-point home favorite last season. Tulsa actually out-gained the Owls in that contest and held a 27-15 advantage in first downs, but the Golden Hurricane turned the ball over three times including a fumble that was returned for a touchdown. Tulsa earned arguably the most-impressive win of The American Conference season thus far, beating Tulane 60-10 in New Orleans. The Green Wave didn't find the scoreboard until the fourth quarter when the score was 46-0. QB Baylor Hayes went 26-of-33 for 338 yards with four touchdowns and no turnovers. Tulsa's last five games have all gone over the total. Florida Atlantic's last six games have all gone over the total, including last week's 60-29 home win over UTSA. If you've been following The Football GoldSheet newsletter all season, you know that FAU is probably the highest-variance team in the country. After leading the country in fourth down attempts last year, FAU has attempted the fourth-most so far this season. The results of this game will likely come down to a couple high-leverage plays, but we have a little more trust in Tulsa at the moment. Also, don't forget that the Golden Hurricane beat Oklahoma State earlier this season, so Tulsa has experience against a high-flying passing attack.

Tulane has won each of the last two meetings, but the Owls stayed within the number as a double-digit 'dog in both. The Green Wave is fortunate that last week's college football slate featured several marquee games, because Tulane's shocking 50-point home loss to Tulsa managed to stay under the national radar. That was just the latest result in a head-scratching set of games that saw Tulane lose by 23 at home to UTSA and need overtime to get past 1-8 Charlotte. This was always projected to be a rebuilding year in New Orleans, but rebuilding teams traditionally get better as the season goes on, not collapse. Tulane had a bye in early October, so this will be the Green Wave's sixth-straight week with a game. Assuming this point spread holds true, this would be Rice's first game as a favorite against an FBS-level opponent this season. From a power ratings' perspective, we're struggling to get to this number. But if you're a team that's apparently dealing with motivation issues, an opponent that runs the triple option is not someone you want to see on your schedule. Army was able to run for 329 yards and 19 first downs against the Green Wave earlier this season. Tulane also represents a steep drop in class compared to some of the American Conference opponents that Rice has seen thus far - UTSA, Tulsa, Florida Atlantic and North Texas.

Progress is being measured differently these days at UTEP, where a three-point home loss to Hawaii might be enough to get locals who have been watching the simulcast racing card at nearby Sunland Park to instead head out to the Sun Bowl for the next game. So perhaps the crowd will reach five digits on Saturday, but we advise Miners fans to temper their enthusiasm. After all, it was down to Rainbow Warrior wastefulness why that scoreline was only 17-14 last week, and HC Scotty Walden is trying as best he can to stitch an offense together with backup QB Raymond Moore III, whose most effective plays are scrambles out of the pocket while starter EJ Colson Jr continues to battle nagging injuries. The problem, as Walden has noted, is that UTEP continues to lose at the line of scrimmage, with escapes by Moore and/or Colson (when healthy) the only viable alternatives, though it's probably more of the same against Jay Sawvel's brawling Wyoming defense allowing only 21.7 ppg. The biggest difference between the Miners and Cowboys, however, is that Sawvel and new OC Christian Taylor (via William & Mary) have been able to shift the Wyoming offense into gear the past month, with dual-threat QB Tyler Hughes (along from W&M with Taylor) running for 400 yards across the past three games as the read-option has kicked on, with a pair of Cowboy RBs (Samuel Harris & Markel Holman) each over 110 rushing yards in last week's win at UNLV. There's a fly in the ointment, however...Hughes sat out the second half last week vs. the Rebels with an arm injury, with backup Landon Sims serviceable, if not as explosive, in relief. They'll be evaluating the status of Hughes through the week, though even with Sims, the Cowboys ought to be able to outscore this punchless foe. Just over the Tetons, however, is next week's Mountain West showdown vs. New Mexico at Laramie, and Sawvel might decide to err on the side of caution and not risk Hughes vs. this beatable foe. No matter the QB, because it's UTEP on the other side, the now bowl-eligible Cowboys ought to be able to extend their unlikely late-season ascent while winning and covering for the fifth straight week.

11/10 6:26 AM PST — Nagging injuries continues to hamper Miners QB EJ Colson Jr, who missed altogether last Saturday's 17-14 loss to Hawaii while backup Raymond Moore III (who has taken almost as many snaps as Colson this season) went all of the way at the Sun Bowl.
11/10 6:27 AM PST — Emerging Cowboys QB Tyler Hughes (400 rushing yards the past three games) didn't play in the second half of last Saturday's 41-35 win at UNLV, as an arm injury put backup Landon Sims in the lineup for the last 30 minutes. More updates on the status of Hughes to come later in the week, though Mountain West sources won't be surprised if HC Jay Sawvel errs on the side of caution and not risk Hughes this week with the New Mexico showdown on deck next Saturday.

Kudos to Arizona special teams and HC Brent Brennan, who ordered the sort of pooch onside kick we have always favored in the last two minutes last Friday vs. TCU. The Frogs, as expected, had trouble fielding the pop-up and the Wildcats' subsequent recovery paved the way for the last-minute field goal that kept UA's longshot Big XII title game hopes alive. The 'Cats might still need some help to get to Arlington, but can take a big step in the right direction if knocking the visiting Utes from the unbeaten ranks. In recent years, the game after the BYU Holy War has been a bit tricky for Utah, which in the last five of those has only covered last year vs. a fading Colorado. Little things have been breaking right for the Utes as they have carried their unlikely unbeaten record into mid-November, such catching the Cougs last week with key RB LJ Martin making only token contributions after returning from injury, the week after being gifted a Cincy side that was flat after the post-game storming of the field at Nippert Stadium the preceding Saturday in the Texas Tech upset. Not sure the Utes have their usual QB edge this week with the lively Devon Dampier, either, as the Cats' Noah Fifita continues to fire away with his decorated career in Tucson coming to a close. At 21 TD passes and just five picks this season, Fifita is now up to 94 career TD passes, and is also completing a career-best 73-percent of his throws this season. For what it's worth, one of the few bright moments during Brent Brennan's desultory opening season with the Cats two years ago was a 23-10 win at Salt Lake City, one of only two spread covers in 2024 for Arizona. Besides, with all of the twists and turns of this college football season, are the Utes really going to be able to run the table in the regular season?

Sam Houston has won each of the last two meetings since the Bearkats and Owls joined the FBS ranks, but Kennesaw covered the spread as a double-digit 'dog in both. Sam Houston is 0-6 straight-up and against the spread over its last six games. The Bearkats have lost those games by an average of 23.3 points per game. Sam Houston made a QB switch from Landyn Locke to DJ Bailey in last week's 47-14 loss at Jacksonville State. Locke was only able to generate 6.0 yards per pass attempt before being pulled as the Gamecocks enjoyed a 25-13 advantage in first downs. Kennesaw was also on a six-game losing skid earlier this season, but the Owls are playing some of their best ball right now. Kennesaw has won-and-covered its last two games against Middle Tennessee and Delaware. Remember, this was a big year for Sam Houston, who re-opened its campus stadium after playing an hour away last year because of renovations. The Bearkats' only home win came against FCS-level Nicholls, so Sam Houston hasn't given the home crowd very much to look forward to in the new stadium. At this point, playing at home might be a detriment for the Bearkats. Kennesaw or pass, in our opinion.

With two losses in three weeks, BYU has dropped a couple of tiers in the playoff queue and likely needs help from elsewhere to get back into the 12-team frame. The Cougs are also going to have to take care of their own business, which hasn't been easy since the Notre Dame upset, having also dropped three in a row vs. the spread. The good news was that RB LJ Martin, out since the TCU game on October 3 with an ankle injury, finally returned to active duty last week at Utah, though he might not be ready to make much impact after carrying the ball just seven times vs. the Utes, and QB Bear Bachmeier suddenly not finding it easy to play hero every week. The other problem this Saturday is a suddenly resurgent Baylor bunch that has responded to the dismissal of HC Dave Aranda like Manchester United did a season ago (mind, we're talking last season, not this season, with Man U) after Ruben Amorim was moved out and Michael Carrick steadied the ship nicely thereafter. Though he might not be a candidate for the full-time position, interim Joe Klanderman (promoted from DC; previously at Kansas State) has created a spark, with the Bears now 2-0 on his watch and scoring nearly 42 points per game in the process. More noteworthy is Florida transfer QB DJ Lagway finally smoothing out some of his rough spots and playing like a Heisman candidate the past two weeks, with six TD passes and no picks while accounting for over 340 yards of offense pg across the past two wins. A further exam of BYU's season notes that Kalani Sitake's troops haven't had it easy against anyone since facing an impoverished Colorado State in mid-September, so you bet the points look enticing with a rejuvenated Waco bunch that is playing loose and dangerous and now bowl-eligible to boot.

Missouri State won the lone meeting between these teams, 24-17 in overtime last season. The Bears out-gained the Aggies by 120 yards in that contest as former NMSU quarterback Logan Fife threw four interceptions. We've been drawn to this Missouri State team in recent weeks, and we're going back to the same well. The Bears have covered the spread in three of their last four games, and the lone loss at Delaware can be excused A LITTLE bit because Blue Hens QB Nick Minicucci made a somewhat-surprising return from injury in that game. Missouri State lost on a walk-off field goal last week at Florida International, but the Bears stayed within the spread. Duke transfer QB Henry Belin IV has given Missouri State a lift on offense. With remaining games against Jacksonville State and Liberty, this is probably the Bears' best chance to earn another victory in front of the home fans. Missouri State is 3-1 straight-up and against the spread at home this season, and the Bears out-gained Marshall in their lone home loss (also before making the QB switch to Belin IV). New Mexico State has dropped three of its last four games, and the lone win came against 1-8 Sam Houston. Four of the Aggies' last five games have stayed under the total. Over the last few weeks against Florida International, Jacksonville State and Liberty, the Aggies have been out-scored by a combined margin of 76-17. Missouri State isn't quite in the same tier as those teams, but New Mexico State has struggled to compete with competent opponents this season.

Oregon earned a 38-17 road win in Ann Arbor in 2024 in their lone meeting since the Ducks joined the Big Ten. Oregon has won-and-covered its last two games to hold onto the slim chance of qualifying for the College Football Playoff. QB Dylan Raiola went 25-of-40 for 257 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions in last week's road win at Ohio State. That was the first step in Dan Lanning regaining the trust of those in Eugene after a terrible month of October, which saw Oregon go 1-2 straight-up, 0-3 against the spread. Wolverines head coach Kyle Whittingham is throwing the kitchen sink at the final few weeks of this season (potentially his only season in Ann Arbor?). Offensive coordinator Jason Beck was fired after last week's loss to Michigan State, and Whittingham reopened the QB battle between Tommy Carr and Bryce Underwood, leaving the door open for Underwood to claim his original role. We're going to be watching that decision closely. From purely a ratings perspective, there probably isn't much of a difference between Carr and Underwood. Both have shown flashes. Both have made mistakes. Neither was able to do much under Beck's leadership. But Autzen Stadium is a really tough place to play, and while Underwood certainly has his limitations in the passing game, his experience is likely going to play a factor in how the Wolverines' offense handles this environment. While Carr is a fantastic prospect, three of his first four games have been at home and the lone road game was at Rutgers. With all due respect to the passionate fanbase in Piscataway, Autzen will sound a lot different than SHI Stadium did two weeks ago. If Carr gets the nod, we're going to be looking in Oregon's direction. If it's Underwood, that might require a little bit more convincing.

Delaware earned a 38-16 road win at Florida International last season, earning the outright upset as a 4.5-point 'dog. The Panthers out-gained the Blue Hens in that contest, but a 68-yard punt return for a touchdown helped Delaware get over the hump. The Blue Hens suffered their first setback since QB Nick Minicucci returned from injury. Minicucci did his part against Kennesaw last week, throwing for 408 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions. The Hens' defense didn't hold up its end of the bargain, allowing the Owls to generate 446 total yards on 5.9 yards per play. Delaware was the beneficiary of 15 Kennesaw penalties for 129 yards and the Hens won the turnover battle, but still couldn't get across the finish line. While this game isn't expected to see quite the same wind effects as some others this weekend, there is still the potential for gusts of 25+ miles per hour after the Nor'Easter passes through the Mid-Atlantic. That would likely impact Minicucci and Delaware's passing attack much more than FIU. Liberty is the only team to dominate the Panthers this season, as FIU has produced a number of respectable results. With four wins in-pocket and 1-8 Sam Houston still on the Panthers' schedule, FIU head coach Willie Simmons can use bowl eligibility as a nice motivational carrot this week. That requires a win over Delaware on Saturday, however.

Louisiana Tech earned a 30-20 home win over the Eagles last season when Southern Miss was looking to capture the Sun Belt West Division. Unfortunately for the Eagles, not too many players will be looking for revenge because only a handful remain from last year's squad. The Bulldogs have been one of the best under-theradar stories in college football this season. Louisiana Tech is a field goal away from being 9-0 against the spread this season (beat Louisiana by one as a 3.5-point favorite). Over the last four weeks, La Tech has covered the spread by an average of 11.0 points per game. Louisiana Tech QB Blake Baker was unable to finish last week's win over Troy with an undisclosed injury. The Bulldogs' coaching staff will monitor his progress through out the week. Back-up QB Trey Kukuk does have some playing experience and he went 8-for-10 with a touchdown in relief of Baker against the Trojans. While we would certainly like to see Baker, we're comfortable laying this number with either at the helm. During this current four-game winning streak at the betting window, the Bulldogs' defense has allowed an average of 9.3 points per game. Southern Miss just lost by 31 at home against James Madison last week, in addition to other double-digit losses to Arkansas State, Troy, UConn and Auburn.

We're well far enough into this season where we can begin to draw conclusions about most teams. Some, like Virginia, can safely be categorized as disappointments. There are others like Cal, who could be charitably described as abject disappointments. It's too early to make any absolute proclamations about first-year Golden Bears HC Tosh Lupoi, but by all indicators this hire at his alma mater by GM Ron Rivera has been a mess, from misguided staff hires to stripping play-calling duties from one of his coordinators to dubious in-game strategies to likely poisoning the well for supposed program savior QB Jaron Keawe-Sagopolutele, who seems odds-on to move away from Berkeley after this fall's disappointments. More than a few Bay Area onlookers have also noted that the best answer for Cal's head coaching situation might be on staff, Nick Rolovich, who led Hawaii and Washington State with aplomb before running afoul of the Covid police in Pullman, and who held the interim job for the Hawaii Bowl last December after Rivera made Justin Wilcox walk the plank. Maybe last week's bye did the Golden Bears some good, though after losing three straight prior by 21 or more, Cal might be better off for the byes to continue through the end of the month. Granted, only because the Bears have been so bad would we consider backing the 4-5 Wahoos, who are going to have to scramble to even get bowl-eligible in November, almost unthinkable for a side that cracked the national rankings in September when considered one of Miami's most-likely challengers in the ACC. Virginia also hasn't covered a spread vs. an FBS foe since the long-ago Week Zero win over NC State. Regional sources, however, are a bit more confident of a UVa recovery after the Cavs' own three-game losing streak that included a 51-7 pasting administered by Wake Forest when last seen on Halloween. Minus a reliable infantry diversion (only 19 rushing yards on October 31 vs. the Demon Deacons), QB Beau Pribula has been flustered, and there is talk that ex-Pitt Eli Holstein, on in relief vs. Wake, might soon get a longer look from Tony Elliott. For the time being, however, we'd just rather take our chances going against Cal, which has been an enhanced-level of bad from the 'Hoos and might need to be cattle-prodded to make another trip to the Eastern Time Zone.

This will be the first meeting between the Tigers and Longhorns since LSU's 45-38 win in 2019. Texas has won-and-covered its last three games as the 'Horns cling to a College Football Playoff spot. Prior to this recent uptick, Texas was on an 0-5 run against the spread. Tiger Stadium is one of the toughest places in the country to play, but if Lane Kiffin's team doesn't come out with fire this week, the native Cajuns are not going to be happy. An early-season loss at Ole Miss can largely be excused because the Rebels were treating that game like it was the only one on their schedule in 2026. Losses to Kentucky (as a 9.5-point favorite) and Alabama (as a 6.5-point home favorite) are a different story. LSU still has to travel to Tennessee next week, so if the Tigers don't take care of business in this one, Kiffin could be staring at a five-loss campaign in his debut season. Texas QB Arch Manning still makes some head-scratching decisions, but the same can probably be said for LSU QB Sam Leavitt. Manning went 28-of-38 for 297 yards with three touchdowns and no interceptions in last week's road win at Missouri. Manning hasn't thrown an interception in three of his last four games, and that stability is going to be vital in this environment. Leavitt has nine interceptions in nine games this season, so any criticism thrown Manning's way can probably apply to the Tigers' signal caller as well. We've also raised several concerns about whether Leavitt's frame could handle the grind of an SEC slate. After averaging 55.0 rushing yards in the Tigers' first four games, Leavitt has produced an average of 24.0 rushing yards over the last five contests. Six-foot-two quarterbacks that weigh 215 pounds typically don't make it through an SEC slate unscathed. Leavitt was sacked four times in last week's loss to Alabama, and those hits are going to continue to mount.

The Gamecocks and Razorbacks have only met one time in the last eight years - A 44-30 Arkansas home win in 2022. For what it's worth, each of the last six meetings have gone over the total, but most of those games were played 15 years ago. Arkansas continues to show modest improvement for first-year head coach Ryan Silverfield. Arkansas has covered the spread in three of the last four games, including a narrow road loss at Auburn last week. Five of the Razorbacks' last six games have stayed under the total, and that is the only direction we can look in this one. The Gamecocks received quite a scare from starting QB LaNorris Sellers, who suffered an ankle injury in the first half of last week's win over Texas A&M. He eventually returned (with a notable limp), and he is expected to play this week. South Carolina has won-and-covered each of its last four games, and the Gamecocks' defense has an opportunity to put the clamps down in this one. Arkansas doesn't have much to offer on offense at the moment. KJ Jackson went 14-of-30 for 180 yards last week against Auburn. Top receiver Chris Marshall returned from injury and caught five passes, but the Razorbacks' offense is pretty easy to defend when you know Jackson is only looking in one receiver's direction. South Carolina ends the season with games against Georgia and Clemson. We're not saying it's going to happen, but if the Gamecocks do find themselves in the driver's seat in this contest, they will likely be looking to take the air out of the ball in the second half.

That was most definitely a gut-wrencher in Tucson last Friday night for TCU, which looked like it had dodged a bullet when host Arizona missed a two-point conversion that could have tied the score with 1:45 to play, only to bobble a subsequent pop-up onside kick and gift possession to the Wildcats at the Frogs' 30-yard-line before Michael Salgado-Medina's 37-yard field goal gave Arizona a stunning 29-28 win. The pressure thus mounts in Fort Worth on HC Sonny Dykes, which we find a bit unfair considering the recent pair of 9-4 seasons and bowl wins for TCU (including an exciting OT success using backup QB Ken Seals vs. USC in last December's Alamo Bowl) and a trip to the national title game in Dykes' first season at the helm back in 2022. There was another development of interest last week in Tucson, as after a season of the offense mostly spinning its wheels, suddenly things began to click for Ivy league transfer QB Jaden Craig, who completed 28-of-41 passes, with half of those going to new favorite target TE Kari Ashley as TCU scored its most points all season vs. a power conference foe. Craig's recent upgrade also suggests that TCU at least has a fighting chance to get bowl-eligible (which Dykes might need, at the least, to keep the support base onside), which we're not at all sure about with visiting Kansas State, whose season has gone into a steep descent with three straight losses greatly jeopardizing bowl eligibility (which we suspect the 'Cats won't get) and completely humiliated last week by a rampant Oklahoma State, which put up 66 points and 565 yards of offense in a blowout win at Manhattan. Moreover, it looks like the neck/shoulder injury to QB Avery Johnson is going to keep him out for the duration (especially as Johnson's connections apparently don't want him rushed back into the lineup and risk aggravating the injury further and perhaps hampering Johnson's draft status, where some bold forecasters believe he has Patrick Mahomes traits). With backup Jacob Knuth (ankle) also hurting, alum and first-year HC Collin Klein is down to his third and fourth options, junior Blake Barnett and sophomore Dillon Duff, whose limitations were exposed last week when combining for three picks in the blowout loss to Eric Morris' Cowboys. Now, facing a Frogs defense that ranks among the nation's leaders (22nd overall), K-State's recent struggles might not abate.
Play TCU

11/10 6:41 AM PST — With starting QB Avery Johnson still sidelined (likely for the season) by neck/shoulder injuries and backup Jacob Knuth hobbled by an ankle sprain, WIldcats HC Collin Klein had to go once more with third-and-fourth options Blake Barnett and Dillon Duff last week vs. Oklahoma State. Results were predictable as the pair combined for three picks in a heavy loss to the Cowboys. Unless Knuth recovers quickly, Klein is likely forced into the same situation with his QBs this week.

The blueprint this season for Scott Frost at UCF was for James Madison transfer QB Alonza Barnett II to lead a resurgence, but we'll never know how things might have turned out in Orlando after Barnett went on the shelf for half of the campaign with a hamstring pull suffered in early September at Pitt. Better late than never, however, for Barnett to return to active duty, which he did late in the previous week's heavy loss to Baylor when replacement Keyone Jenkins was largely ineffective, before it was Barnett back in the cockpit from the off last week at Kansas. Good thing for Frost, too, and Barnett kept his cool and led a wild 73-yard TD drive in the last minute to score in the final second, stunning the Jayhawks after the Knights had blown a 19-point lead. Getting bowl eligible is the next step for Frost (who, amazingly, hasn't had a winning record in a season since that memorable unbeaten run during his first stint at UCF in 2017), and it might help that Kenny Dillingham brings a rather green freshman QB with him from Tempe, Jake Fette, who in truth, hasn't looked too much out of his depth in recent weeks since replacing the injured Mikey Keene. Until the second half last week vs. Colorado, that is, when the ASU offense effectively stalled behind Fette as the Buffs made a late bid to get back into the game. We're simply a bit more interested in taking a chance with UCF now that Barnett, last year's Sun Belt MVP, is back in the lineup, and with the Knights beginning to specialize in late-game heroics (remember the BYU upset in OT a few weeks ago?).

11/10 6:59 AM PST — Top Knights rusher and Louisville transfer RB Duke Watson (596 rushing yards, 6.3 yards per carry in 2026) went out early with a foot injury in last Saturday's exciting 33-32 UCF win at Kansas. Watson was seen in a walking boot along the sideline later in the game, with an update on his status likely coming later in the week from HC Scott Frost.

Virginia Tech earned a 31-7 road win at Stanford in 2024 in their lone meeting since the Cardinal joined the ACC. Stanford is coming off its bye after previously losing at Louisville by 28. This will be the Cardinal's fifth trip east this season. The first four saw a 28-point loss at Duke, a 54-point loss at Wake Forest, a 51-point loss at Notre Dame and that 28-point loss to the Cardinals on Halloween. Five of Stanford's last six games have gone over the total. The James Franklin experience at Virginia Tech has hit a few construction zones in recent weeks. Franklin called a 4am coaches meeting following last Friday's 51-28 loss at SMU. The Hokies were coming off a bye in that contest, which makes that result even more concerning. Franklin now returns to the role that he loves: Home favorite. After dominating inferior competition at Penn State, Franklin's Hokies are 3-0 against the spread as a home favorite this season (removing the game vs Pitt, which was a glorified pick'em). Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. All three of Stanford's wins this season haven't aged well. Hawaii is 3-6 and sitting on the cusp of missing a bowl. Georgia Tech is 2-7 and the Yellow Jackets just fired half their coaching staff. NC State is 4-5 and the Wolfpack have already fired head coach Dave Doeren. So when you factor those weak wins with Stanford's inability to travel east, it's tough to make a case for the Cardinal.

Texas Tech has won-and-covered each of the last two meetings, including a 42-0 home win over the Cowboys last season. Oklahoma State has changed its coaching staff with great success since that meeting, but we'll also note that Texas Tech did play Eric Morris' North Texas team in 2024 (a 45-point TTU win), so the Red Raiders do have a little bit of experience against Morris' high-flying attack. Both teams are coming off wins last week. Oklahoma State handled business as a road favorite at Kansas State, while Texas Tech has picked up wins over Arizona and West Virginia. The Cowboys had an early-season bye, so this will be their sixth-straight week with a game. Oklahoma State's last six games have all flown over the total. Ultimately, we're interested in taking the points with the Red Raiders. On-again, off-again QB Thomas Castellanos was inserted into the starting lineup two weeks ago, and he's run for 100+ yards in each of the last two games. Castellanos' legs give Texas Tech's offense a dimension that it didn't have with Will Hammond running the show. Also, with Castellanos being used primarily as a runner, that keeps the clock running and the Cowboys' offense on the sidelines. Iowa State ran for 272 yards against Oklahoma State. West Virginia ran for 335 yards against Oklahoma State. The blueprint is there for others to follow. Big XII also-rans like Colorado and Kansas State haven't been able to take advantage, but a team like Texas Tech is capable.

Curt Cignetti has been able to maintain control of every detail during his 2.5 years at Indiana, but it feels like he's losing his grip on this current season. In Monday's press conference, Cignetti announced that he's not ready to announce a starting QB this week between Josh Hoover and Grant Wilson. With a non-conference schedule that included North Texas, Howard and Western Kentucky, Cignetti knew that he would be playing with a little bit of fire by strictly relying on the Big Ten slate. Here's the problem: That Big Ten slate now looks terrible, too. Every Big Ten team that Indiana has played thus far - Northwestern, Rutgers, Nebraska, Ohio State, Michigan and Minnesota - all lost last week. Nebraska has lost four-straight games. Ohio State has lost back-to-back games. Michigan is 2-4 in conference play. None of those wins hold the same amount of weight as they previously did, and the College Football Playoff Committee let Cignetti know how they feel about his team. In a week where the Hoosiers didn't take the field, they dropped from No. 4 to No. 9. Indiana is still firmly in the playoff mix, but the committee let Cignetti know that his margin for error has seemingly gotten much smaller. USC's road struggles are well-documented, but we just need the Trojans to stay within a touchdown. We don't need a win. We don't need margin. We don't need style points. Just keep it within a touchdown, which is something that Northwestern, Nebraska, Ohio State, Michigan and Minnesota were all able to accomplish against the Hoosiers.

Have you ever seen a college football team generate 457 total yards with 26 first downs and not score a single touchdown?! Texas A&M pulled off that feat in Columbia last week. The Aggies out-gained South Carolina by 97 yards and held a 26-17 advantage in first downs, but never saw the end zone. Running back Rueben Owens II generated 137 yards on 19 carries (7.2 yards per attempt). Ultimately, Marcel Reed's limitations in the passing game were a little too much for A&M to overcome. Five of the Aggies' last six games have stayed under the total. If this game was a month earlier, we'd probably be racing to bet A&M. You've got one team that just earned a signature home win over a ranked opponent that has some road concerns, traveling to a team that dominated the box score last week but lost. Conventional handicapping wisdom would suggest a look toward the Aggies. However, given where this game falls on the calendar, we may not be seeing things the same way. Texas A&M is legitimately in danger of missing a bowl game after opening the year in the top-10. If Reed and the Aggies stumble out of the gates, what's the mood inside Kyle Field going to be? A&M still has to play Oklahoma and Texas. A 4-8 season with wins over Missouri State, Arizona State, Arkansas and The Citadel is firmly on the table of possibilities. Vols' edge rusher Tyree Weathersby will miss the rest of the regular season with a knee injury. Weathersby led Tennessee with seven sacks this season, including two in the win over Alabama in mid-October. Reed facing a Jim Knowles-coached defense is a nightmare matchup for the struggling QB.

Georgia has won each of the last ten meetings, but Missouri has stayed within the number as a 'dog in each of the last three. The 'Dawgs and Tigers haven't met since Georgia's 30-21 home win in 2023. Few players and coaches remain from those meetings, but for what it's worth, the Bulldogs' defense has held Missouri to an average of 265.6 yards per game over the last five meetings. Georgia has cemented its place as the current top team in the country, beating Florida and Ole Miss by a combined margin of 69-15 over the last two weeks. Georgia is 8-1 straight-up, 7-2 against the spread this season and one of the two spread losses came by two points (beat Vandy by 24 as a 25.5-point favorite). Missouri is looking to regain its footing after a handful of tough results. The Tigers are coming off a 34-20 home loss to Texas last week with a final score that is probably a little flattering for the Longhorns. Missouri played Texas even for almost 60 minutes, but the 'Horns made the necessary plays down the stretch. The Tigers have played a tough schedule thus far, but through no fault of their own, Missouri's resume is taking some hits. That early-October win over Florida has lost some shine considering the Gators have lost four of their last five games. A 27-6 home win over Texas A&M isn't holding much weight considering the Aggies may miss a bowl game. The same is true for a win over Arkansas. This is a big number to lay, but Georgia is 5-2 against the spread as a double-digit favorite this season. With a tough road game at South Carolina on the horizon, look for Georgia to make relatively-quick work of Missouri with some explosive drives in the first half.

Liberty has won each of the three meetings since these teams joined Conference-USA, with the last one being a 37-17 road win in 2024. Since falling at James Madison in the opener, Liberty has gone 8-0 straight-up, 7-1 against the spread (lone spread loss vs FCS-level Gardner-Webb). The Flames return home after handling business at New Mexico State last week. Four of Liberty's last five games have stayed under the total as the Flames have allowed an average of 9.4 points per game during that span. Middle Tennessee earned its fifth win of the season last week over Western Kentucky, which puts the Blue Raiders on the cusp of a bowl berth. That's likely going to factor into this handicap. Early forecasts have this game tagged as potentially one of the most wind-affected games following the late-week Nor'Easter across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic with gusts between 25-30 miles per hour, depending on the storm's path. Middle Tennessee ends the season against Sam Houston and New Mexico State, so even if the Blue Raiders struggle in this contest, they will have two strong opportunities to earn a sixth win. You're a three-touchdown 'dog at the best team in the conference with the potential for bad weather. Derek Mason is a veteran head coach, and if this game isn't going his way, he may pack the bus up early and start looking ahead to the Bearkats.

This one might only have appeal to hard-core gridiron junkies like Nick Saban, Paul Finebaum and a few others. We know about Northern Illinois still being winless past Veteran's Day, but the new development in the Mountain West is Nevada checking to see if QB alums like Colin Kaepernick might have eligibility remaining, or, more sensibly perhaps, CFL All-Star Cody Fajardo, as the Pack hasn't scored a TD in its past two games. The light, if there is such a thing in DeKalb, at the end of the tunnel this weekend is that Nevada isn't facing UCLA or New Mexico, two of the nation's better defenses that have put the Pack into a strait-jacket the past two weeks. It's also possible that lively QB Carter Jones, who hasn't played since the October 10 win at UTEP due to arm issues, might finally get back into a lineup that obviously has major limitations if forced to use former UCLA transfer Luke Duncan (who was pulled against his former team two weeks ago when tossing three picks in the first 7:27) or longtime backup AJ Bianco, who has been dealing with his own ankle injury but has also tossed just two TD passes in 102 attempts this season. The plus side for Nevada is that it has handled the lower rungs of the Mountain West, winning handily at UTEP and at home vs. San Jose State, because Jeff Choate's defense is still pretty robust (allowing only 22 ppg) and the ground game featuring RBs Dominic Kelley and Herschel Turner (combined 1104 rushing yards) has been rather serviceable this season until bogging down completely vs. the Bruins and Lobos the past two weeks. Rest assured Nevada isn't running into the same this week, as the host Huskies just allowed San Jose to score 30 (hard to do) in the latest loss last weekend, and Rob Harley is considering writing a book on "Why Not To Be An Interim Head Coach" after his promotion following predecessor Michael Hammock's move to the NFL Seahawks staff has yet to produce a win. Still, trusting the Pack offense (especially of QB Jones is scratched again) to stretch a margin these days is risky business, but do we really want to trust a winless NIU team in mid-November? A better idea in this Mountain West pillow fight might be "under" considering the Pack has comfortably landed that way in three straight.

Jacksonville State is 3-1 straight-up and against the spread in this series since the Gamecocks joined Conference USA. Jacksonville State earned a 37-34 home win over the Hilltoppers last season. The Gamecocks have produced 500+ yards in each of the last two meetings. Western Kentucky returns home after a pair of losses to Delaware and Middle Tennessee. The Hilltoppers have made a bowl game in seven-straight seasons, but that string is in serious jeopardy right now as WKU must sweep its final three games. In addition to this game against Jacksonville State, the 'Toppers must also beat C-USA favorite Liberty and last year's conference champ, Kennesaw State, to reach the postseason. That feels like a pipedream based on the way Western Kentucky has played this season. Jacksonville State is 6-0 straight-up, 5-1 against the spread over the last six games. Over the last two weeks, the Gamecocks have out-scored New Mexico State and Sam Houston by a combined margin of 71-14. With all of that said, we're still struggling with laying this many points on the road. Three of the four meetings between these teams have been decided by three points or fewer. Jacksonville State has a four-point win over Georgia Southern, a one-point win over Kennesaw and a three-point win over Florida International. The Gamecocks don't need style points, they just need wins.

Long-time Notre Dame fans will be having a little bit of deja vu as they sit down to watch this contest. In 1993, the unbeaten Irish took down then-No. 1 Florida State in South Bend in front of a nationally-televised audience by the score of 31-24. The following week, Notre Dame lost at home to Boston College. Fast-forward to 2026 where Notre Dame just beat then-No. 1 Miami by the same 31-24 score, and now has to face Boston College at home. Kinda creepy, huh? The Irish have won each of the last ten meetings in this series, but Boston College easily covered the spread last season as a 30.5-point 'dog, which is the same number we're looking at in this contest. The Irish got the job done against the 'Canes last week, but Notre Dame is just 1-4 against the spread over its last five games. Five of Notre Dame's last six games have gone over the total. Boston College has run hot-and-cold this season, but with the exception of a dud against Duke on Halloween, the Eagles have generally shown up to play each week. Notre Dame has suffered a number of notable injuries on the defensive side, and that attrition is what helped the Hurricanes get back into last week's contest in the second half. Eagles' QB Mason McKenzie has made the adjustment from D-II to ACC play, and we believe he can do enough to keep Boston College within this lofty spread.

Everything was clicking for Texas State last Saturday night in Corvallis, especially the ground game that abused Oregon State for 386 yards and made the going a lot easier for dual-threat QB Brad Jackson, who staked the Bobcats to a 42-7 lead before a couple of late, decorative Beaver TDs made the final score a bit more palatable for the losers. With the ability to chew up yards on the ground thanks in large part to RB Torrance Burgess, Jr (among the nation's leaders with 1118 rushing yards) and the mobile Jackson (523 rushing yards), Texas State has the ability to strafe opposing defenses, as the Bobcats also did in mid-October when dropping a 66-point bomb on yielding Colorado State. Fresno, however, isn't as likely to get pushed around in quite the same manner, having recently whipped the same Oregon State that Texas State pounded last week. The Bulldogs' recurring issues are on offense, where despite progress from earlier in the season, big plays are few as junior QB Jayden Mandal mostly throws the ball short. Mandal doesn't make many mistakes (only two picks all season), however, and when the Bulldogs can get their ground game to work even somewhat efficiently (which it didn't last week at Utah State), Mandal's play-action sells a lot better. Against a 115th-ranked Bobcat defense, it's a bit easier to envision Fresno balancing out things on the offensive end. Still, a Bulldog recommendation hangs its hat on the Matt Entz defense, which recently put the collar on aforementioned Oregon State when sacking Beaver QB Braden Atkinson five times and pressuring him several other instances. They'll have to do similar to disrupt the playmaking Jackson, but as no foe has really torched the Bulldogs since USC back in early September (when the offense provided no help), the case for Fresno to hang around has some merit.

We suppose that ESPN assigned its Game Day crew to Boise for this date a few weeks ago when this clash looked like a Pac-12 showdown on the blue turf between the Broncos and a resurgent Oregon State. Since then, however, the Beavers have been surging the wrong way, two thumping losses in a row since their bye week now quieting the considerable buzz that was being generated from Corvallis not long ago, and prompting us to consider a new “Bye Theory” for hot teams that hit a break in the schedule on a hot streak...but lose momentum thereafter. Kentucky might be a candidate out of the SEC after last week’s loss at Tennessee, and most definitely, Oregon State as well after both Fresno State and Texas State have walloped the Beavs since their bye. Perhaps it’s the lack of a consistent infantry diversion that is finally catching up to what until recently has been a swashbuckling Beaver attack for new HC JaMarcus Shephard and his Mercer transfer QB, Braden Atkinson, who has spent most of the fall atop national passing stats (both yards and TDs). Being one-dimensional, however, has apparently caught up with Oregon State, while opposing defenses are finally doing a better job containing (at least somewhat) frosh sensation wideout Jesse Legree, who has been held under 100 receiving yards for the first time this season the past two weeks. A bigger problem lately for Shephard is that the offense losing its zip has exposed a defense that was able to benefit from playing with big leads thru the first half of the season. Not so lately, as both the opposing Bulldogs and Bobcats have moved freely the past two weeks, with Texas State especially ruthless last Saturday when ripping away for 386 yards on the ground. That’s bad news against Boise and its new version of Ashton Jeanty, as junior Dylan Riley is now atop the national rushing charts with a whopping 1,241 rushing yards (with a few games still to go) and 6.7 yards per carry. Any thoughts that the Broncos might be missing QB Maddux Madsen (knee; out last week) need to be dispelled quickly, too, as backup Max Cutforth has been positively Mariano Rivera-like in relief, with Boise accounting for 85 points in the last five quarters of play (you read that right) with him in the lineup, tossing for 7 TDs and 448 yards on just 32 attempts in that span when not handing the ball off to Riley. Meanwhile, with the Beavers close to being out of contention for a berth in the Pac-12 title game, we might have something better to look forward to in three weeks...a possible rematch of the Texas State-Boise State Game of the Year candidate from Halloween on the blue carpet.
Play Boise State

11/10 7:12 AM PST — The Broncos were minus QB Maddux Madsen (knee) last week at Colorado State, though HC Spencer Danielson has indicated the injury is not season-ending. The Madsen news can also be regarded as a sidebar storyline at best as backup QB Max Cutforth has looked better than Madsen ever did, tossing seven TD passes across the past five quarters of Boise football against Texas State and the Rams, as the Broncos have scored a hard-to-fathom 85 points (!) in that span, including 64 last week at Fort Collins vs. the defenseless Rams!

Kentucky is 4-1 straight-up and against the spread over the last five meetings, including a 38-7 home win in Lexington last season. The 'Cats out-gained the Gators by over 150 yards in that contest. Both teams are looking to get back in the win column after falling short last week. Kentucky's six-game winning streak came to a close with a 34-6 loss at Tennessee, while Florida has lost four of its last five games. After scoring 66, 52, 44 and 52 points to open the season, the Gators' offense has scored an average of 15.6 points per game over the last five contests. Florida's last four games have stayed under the total. Kentucky's last three games have all stayed under the total. Florida hasn't looked very good in recent weeks and we've given the Gators a stiff downgrade, but we're still struggling to justify a 4.5-point spread in this matchup. Kentucky took some body blows in last week's loss to the Vols. QB Kenny Minchey was sacked four times and the Vols generated 240 rushing yards. Sometimes, physical games like that tend to linger into the next week. Florida is largely in the same boat after getting beat by Oklahoma last week, but we'd much rather take the 4.5 points in a spot like this than lay 'em. Gators' young QB Tramell Jones Jr. has looked shell-shocked at times over the last few weeks, but Kentucky's defense represents a drop in class compared to Texas, Georgia and Oklahoma, which Florida has played over the last three games.

It didn't work too well for Tom Landry's Dallas Cowboys back in 1971 when trying to alternate QBs Roger Staubach and Craig Morton (hence the decision to simply ride with Staubach), but Troy Calhoun seems to be making it work at Air Force. As the Falcons sewed up their first Commander-in-Chief's Trophy in four years last Saturday at West Point, Calhoun rolled with a pair of QBs, Evan Medders (back in action after a recent toe injury) and the bruising, 245-lb ex-linebacker Kemper Hodges, who combined to account for 262 of the Force's 344 yards in a 24-21 win. Unlike Hodges, who won't throw, Medders can occasionally sneak the ball downfield as the Force recorded its most passing yards last week (84) since going up top for 92 yards at Nevada in September. It's all familiar stuff for the Falcons, now back to leading the national rushing stats with 332 yards per game on the ground, but Calhoun is 7-2 this season also because of his best defense in a few years at the foot of Pike's Peak, holding Army (182 rushing yards) to just over half of its normal rushing production last week, while LB Blake Fletcher is showing up on some All-America ballots. Meanwhile, we're not as impressed with the Spartans getting in the win column lately vs. lowly UTEP and Northern Illinois, as in their last five games against teams not named the Huskies or Miners, Ken Niumatalolo's offense is scoring barely 14 points per game. The QB roulette wheel at San Jose has landed once again on frosh Daniel Rolovich, who piloted the wins over UTEP and NIU around being KO'd early in the loss at Nevada on October 24--and now is about to find out that not every foe is UTEP or Northern Illinois. Granted, there is an interesting twist in this matchup as Niumatalolo spent 16 seasons as Navy's HC and is well aware of Calhoun's tricks and all of the various option mechanics, but Coach Ken's problem this season is his own offense that has found little rhythm.

11/10 11:48 AM PST — The Spartans went back to frosh QB Daniel Rolovich, who had been KO'd in the game at Nevada on October 24, last week vs. Northern Illinois, with SJSU getting its second win with Rolovich at the controls.
11/10 11:49 AM PST — With QB Evan Medders back from an ankle injury, Falcs HC Troy Calhoun would alternate Medders with 245-lb. ex-LB Kemper Hodges in last week's 24-21 win at Army.

Dan Mullen's plan to use the UNLV as a springboard back to the Power 4 looks like it has hit a snag. Mountain West sources say it was the Rebels' plan, too, as funding Mullen's full contract value was always going to be a stretch, and administrators were planning on someone hiring away Mullen as Purdue did with Barry Odom after the 2024 campaign, providing UNLV a much-needed windfall from the exit fee buyout that would better balance the financial books. Normally, Mullen might have been considered a hot candidate for the open Maryland job back in more familiar territory, but the Rebels' recent struggles have knocked them out of the Mountain West race and left them scrambling for mere bowl eligibility, and Mullen likely well back in the queue for the Terps job, while the accountants fret in Las Vegas. Meanwhile, on the field, even Wayne Newton and other local celebrities can tell the defense has been failing UNLV lately, having surrendered 40+ points in three of the four losses, including last week vs. Wyoming. Moreover, Mullen might also be contemplating a QB switch from the up-and-down Jackson Arnold to mobile former Michigan transfer Alex Orji, who led a second-half rally vs. the Cowboys after Arnold was benched. The fact that Mullen might even be contemplating this QB switch in mid-November is hardly the sort of development that UNLV needs against Jason Eck's wildman New Mexico stop unit that now leads the nation in overall (240 ypg) and scoring (10.9 ppg) defense, completing a stop-unit-stats-trifecta by also leading the nation in interceptions (along with UCLA) at 17. After looking as careless in recent games as Caleb Williams looked in the second quarter on Sunday night vs. the Bucs, QB Tao Fa'avae had a clean effort last Friday night at Reno vs. the Wolf Pack, completing 14 of 20 passes with no picks (he had six interceptions across the preceding three games). Though again it was Eck's defense setting the tone by holding Nevada to -9 yards rushing and pulling clear at the foot of the Sierras while keeping the Lobos very much in the mix for the Group of 6 berth in the playoffs. Conclusion? As no foe has scored more than 18 points against the voracious New Mexico defense, it's hard to envision UNLV doing much better if Mullen is really contemplating a late-season switch at QB.

11/10 7:23 AM PST — Rebels HC Dan Mullen made a QB switch in the second half last Saturday vs. Wyoming, with ex-Michigan transfer Alex Orji replacing starter Jackson Arnold and leading a pair of TD drives that pulled UNLV closer to the Cowboys. No word yet on a possible permanent switch, though Mountain West sources believe Mullen will be contemplating as much this week.

Bronco Mendenhall is flashing his coaching chops lately, as his Aggies have finally figured out their best way forward on offense while the defense continues to take care of business. Never had his Rocky Long influence been more pronounced for Mendenhall than in recent weeks as Utah State has put the clamps on various percolating offenses (including Texas State and Colorado State), limiting the last three foes to barely 14 points per game. Now, bowl eligibility, which looked as elusive as a good cup of non-decaf coffee in Logan as of a few weeks ago, is a real possibility for the Utags. Especially as the offense has rediscovered some footing with early-season starting QB and ex-BYU McCae Hillstead, who battled injury issues early in the campaign and watched ex-Virginia Grady Brosterhous take most of the snaps into midseason before re-assuming the reins in recent weeks. Now, Hillstead is looking almost Bear Bachmeier-like since Mendenhall made the switch back to him behind center, playing error-free while completing 72-percent of his passes and keeping drives alive with his legs. Meanwhile, we're still waiting to be impressed by the Aztecs, who have been minus QB Jayden Denegal the past two games due to an ankle injury, with the offense briefly reviving under frosh Stone Saunders, though in truth the revival probably had more to do with facing Colorado State's non-defense on October 24 (and Saunders' 369 pass yards, albeit in a losing effort) before a more recent Aztec-like 102 passing yards vs. Washington State. The latter is what we have come to expect from a series of disappointing Sean Lewis offenses on Montezuma Mesa, and mention of Rocky Long is poignant because this isn't the Aztec defense of the many Rocky years, either, doing things like allowing 66 points (vs. Oregon State) and 56 points (vs. CSU) across the past month. The potential return of Denegal would also mostly be a non-event at Snapdragon Stadium.

We wonder how Jim Mora's search for a new defensive coordinator at Colorado State might be going once he has run out of applicants from oil-rig firefighters, commodity brokers and other assorted daredevils. After all, who else might be willing to take on such a thankless task that Mora threw open when hitting the eject button on Tyson Summers before the Rams got to their locker room in a lopsided loss early last month vs. Oregon State? Perhaps Ali Farokhmanesh will apply...after all, his CSU hoopsters allowed only three points more vs. Idaho last Friday than did Mora's defense in the latest humiliation inflicted by Boise State (using its backup QB, mind) last Saturday. The depravity of the Rams stop unit is reflected in national defense stats which see CSU not just in the basement of important categories like points allowed and total defense, but down a mine shaft, at 44.8 points per game conceded, almost seven points per game worse than the next-lowest in the rankings (Charlotte). At 542 yards per game allowed, the Rams have allowed more than 40 yards per game more than the next-lowest (West Virginia). Having allowed 49 or more points in five of the past six games (sheesh!), it's putting an awful burden on capable Oklahoma State transfer QB Hauss Hejny, who accounted for another 322 yards total offense of his own last Saturday, to keep pace. The question here is if we can trust 1-win Washington State, off a bye, to do similar damage, though it can be argued that the Cougs have been playing better lately than CSU, showing fairly well against Oregon State and Boise in the past month and unfortunate not to get a win at San Diego State. It took first-year HC Kirby Moore a while, but the switch to frosh QB Owen Eshelman (almost 1,000 yards of total offense across the past three games) has at least lit a spark in the offense...and the Wazzu defense isn't CSU's.

They're not going to put the game video of last week's painful win at UTEP in any time capsules beneath Diamond Head, but a win is a win and the Rainbow Warriors still remain alive to get eligible for the Sheraton Hawaii Bowl, which saves a place for the local team if they're eligible. That would still require three more wins to close the season, however, and with no more games vs. the Miners or Northern Illinois, Hawaii needs to get a bit more efficient than scoring just 17 points at the Sun Bowl while gaining over 400 yards, or any bowl hopes are likely to soon vanish. Moreover, Timmy Chang might also petition to move this game off of Oahu to Kauai or the big island as the Rainbows are winless outright (0-3) in Mountain West play at the Ching Complex, and it hasn't helped that QB Micah Alejado can be charitably described as having something of a sophomore slump, with his numbers well down from last season, when he tossed 24 TD passes (he's on only 10 this season, with three games to go), while he's also tossed a pick in five straight games. On the other side, this will be the longest road trip ever made by North Dakota State, which is in position to qualify for its first (and it will be the last) Mountain West title game if results elsewhere fall its way the next few weeks. There's no reason to think that the roughhouse Bison defense, which ranks second nationally at just 248 yards per game, can't quell the often-misfiring Hawaii offense as it has done to most foes of that limited caliber this season. Our concerns with NDSU have been with an offense more workmanlike that flashy, as serviceable QB Nathan Hayes mostly throws short (the Bison only have one offensive play that has gained as many as 51 yards this season), and he's not altogether avoided mistakes with eight picks. Still, if any platoon is likely to decide this game, it's the NDSU defense, which also makes the "under" (7-2 in Bison games this season; also 6-1 the last seven Hawaii games) worth a look.

Ole Miss has won each of the last two meetings, including a 34-26 road win at Oklahoma last season. The Sooners took a lead into the fourth quarter before the Rebels engineered two scoring drives in the final frame to steal the win. Oklahoma's defense did a relatively-good job of containing star QB Trinidad Chambliss, who only completed 50.0-percent of his passes in last year's contest. We're looking for Oklahoma to get some revenge this week as the Sooners have the potential to earn the "Team No One Wants to Play Down the Stretch" crown. A 5-4 record is not good enough in Norman, but Sagarin still has Oklahoma rated as a top-20 team and the Sooners have played the No. 7 schedule in the country (which will probably go even lower after this game). There's plenty to be said about the Sooners' offense, but Brent Venables' defense is still one of the best in the country. A 41-13 loss at Georgia wasn't the defense's fault after the Sooners' offense turned the ball over four times. Oklahoma's defense didn't allow 21 points to Kentucky because one of those touchdowns came on a pick-six. The only loss that can truly be pinned on Oklahoma's defense was against South Carolina, and the Sooners' stop unit responded accordingly in last week's 23-7 win at Florida. Former Cowboys tight end Jason Witten is now calling plays for the Sooners' offense, and QB John Mateer looked more comfortable with a new voice in his ear. Ole Miss had an early-season bye, so this is the Rebels' sixth-straight week with a game. With a gauntlet that includes Texas, Georgia and now Oklahoma, the wind may be coming out of the Rebels' sails after last week's 42-7 home loss to the Bulldogs.
