Washington is unbeaten in the last five meetings in this NFC East matchup. Why did we use the word unbeaten? Well, the last meeting ended in a tie. The Giants and Commanders battled to a 27-27 tie on October 11 after the Giants erased a two-touchdown hole in the fourth quarter. Each team found success in different ways as the Commanders ran for over 200 yards while former Giants QB Jameis Winston threw for 326 yards and three touchdowns against Washington's defense. New York earned a 19-11 road win at Philadelphia coming out of the bye week. Starting QB JJ McCarthy was briefly knocked out of that contest with a hip injury, but he returned. The Giants' lone touchdown in that contest was scored by Winston, who is now the back-up. That low-scoring result broke a string of four straight "over" results in New York's games. During his Monday press conference, head coach John Harbaugh said that he expects McCarthy to be ready for this one, even if his hip is a little sore. Washington gave a nice effort last week against the Rams, but ultimately fell short as the Commanders failed to find the end zone in the second half. Jayden Daniels went 24-of-35 for 274 yards with a touchdown and no interceptions, but the Commanders couldn't get anything going in the running game. The under is 4-1 in the Commanders' last five games. Ultimately, the coaching advantage on the Giants' side is too big to ignore. Harbaugh has brought stability and sound decision marking to an organization that was certainly lacking it in recent years. There are plenty of examples in years past where New York would have had a "Here we go again..." attitude last week in Philadelphia where the Giants were losing to a QB making his first career start while dealing with issues of their own. That didn't happen as Big Blue eventually handled business in a professional manner against an inferior opponent. Washington's Dan Quinn gets his players motivated, but he's arguably one of the worst in-game head coaches in the NFL right now. With this being a short week where coaching and prep are vital, we give a strong edge to New York in that department.

The NFL is off to Germany this week, where one might ask if Bayern Munich's recent Ballon d'Or winner and American football fan Harry Kane might be in attendance at the Allianz Arena, given that he has expressed some interest in the past at becoming an NFL place-kicker when his soccer career ends. (Good, perhaps, that the Rams aren't in Munich this week, or Kane might be signed right on the spot). In the meantime they're wondering in Foxborough and the rest of New England if it's going to be the Dr. Jekyll or the Mr. Hyde of Drake Maye's performance pattern that will show up vs. the Lions, as the bad version showed up again last week vs. the Packers when Maye tossed three picks to re-engage with the Chargers' Justin Herbert in this season's NFL interceptions race (Maye, by the way, is now on 11). There have been too many of those subpar performances, dating to last season's playoffs, really, to suggest these stinkers as simply one-offs for Maye, but he does have the ability to rise to the occasion, too, throwing for as many as four TDs in one October game (vs. the Raiders) and engineering the only defeat of the season thus far for the Bills, in Orchard Park, no less, when he accounted for more than 320 yards with his arms and his legs. The Lions might offer a similar challenge, with the development of note in recent weeks an improved defensive effort when it looked like coordinator Kelvin Sheppard was going to go the way of Maryland HC Mike Locksley about a month ago. It has helped Detroit, however, to run into substandard Vikings and Dolphins attacks in the most-recent two outings of the current four-game win streak, which also included a fortunate outcome vs. the Packers when Harry Kane could have likely fared better than Green Bay place kicker Trey Smack, whose missed kicks directly impacted the result. We do note the slower pace of recent Lions games, as none of the past three scorelines have exceeded 37 points ("unders" obviously in each), perhaps as a nod to helping out Sheppard's defense. Mike Vrabel's New England, however, has proven resilient if nothing else, bouncing back with wins immediately after all six of its losses in regular-season action since last season, and with some urgency now for the Pats as they risk falling on the wrong aside of the AFC playoff cut line, this looks a spot where the Dr. Jekyll version of Maye, and Vrabel's track record after a loss, can help the Patriots' cause. But with running backs Rhamondre Stevenson and TreVeyon Henderson both out, plus AJ Brown missing six games for the Patriots, we're not sure they have enough infantry.

Buffalo has won-and-covered each of the last five meetings in this AFC East matchup. The Bills have won those five contests by an average of 20.4 points per game. These teams will meet again in Week 18 to close the regular season. The Jets dropped their fourth-straight game with a 35-12 loss at Kansas City last week. Once again, New York entered the game with a really strong gameplan on offense (four scoring drives - all field goals - in the first half), but the Jets never made the necessary adjustments as the Chiefs won the second half 21-0. Over the last three weeks, New York has failed to cover the point spread by an average of 9.2 points per game. Buffalo is operating on a short week after winning in Minnesota on Monday night. The Bills' 23-6 victory was by-far their lowest-scoring game of the season. Buffalo was missing its starting left tackle and guard, exposing QB Josh Allen to plenty of pressure against the Vikings' super-aggressive defense. That probably won't be as big of an issue this week against a Jets' defense that has allowed 26+ points in each of the last four games. While Buffalo's defense does deserve a tip of the cap for getting the win in a tough road environment, that result had more to do with Carson Wentz's failures than Buffalo's success. Over the last two weeks, the Bills have faced Wentz (making his first appearance in two months) and Baltimore's Joe Fagnano (making his first career start). In the six games prior to that, Buffalo's defense allowed an average of 28.5 points per game. Playing on the second leg of a road back-to-back with a short week, we expect the Jets' offense to move the ball against Buffalo's defense. Against the Raiders and Chiefs, the Jets scored on nine of their 11 drives in the first half (and one of the misses featured a botched field goal attempt). New York has entered these games with a strong gameplan on offense. Let's see if the Jets can keep it together for 60 minutes.

11/10 1:27 PM PST — On Tuesday, Buffalo traded for Tennessee Titans safety Amani Hooker, who leads the NFL with five interceptions this season.

Jacksonville is 7-1 straight-up, 6-2 against the spread over the last eight meetings in this AFC South matchup. The Jaguars earned wins by 22 and 34 points over the Titans last year. These teams will become familiar foes over the next few weeks because they will meet again in Jacksonville on November 29. The Jaguars have won five of their last six games, including a sweat-free win over short-handed Baltimore on Thursday. Jacksonville built a 17-3 lead in the first half and the Ravens didn't find the end zone until midway through the fourth quarter when the score was 33-3. Tennessee is coming off its bye and the Titans put three strong efforts together before the week off. Tennessee beat Indianapolis as a 6.5-point road 'dog before taking both the Browns and Bengals down to the wire. All three of those contests went over their respective totals. Head coach Robert Saleh shared some unusual news on Monday as receiver Calvin Ridley was detained at the Nashville airport, in what Saleh described as "a very minor miscommunication." Keep an eye on his status this week. Jacksonville continues to make all-in moves to make a championship push. The Jaguars sent a first and second round pick to Philadelphia in exchange for defensive tackle Jordan Davis on Monday. From a power ratings' perspective, oddsmakers have opened this game in line with our numbers. But just from an organization standpoint, these teams are simply in different classes right now. Jacksonville's social media team posted a clip of head coach Liam Coen addressing his players and letting them know what to expect at the trade deadline. Along with Chicago's Ben Johnson, Coen is at the head of the class for the next wave of young head coaches that know what they are doing. Coen made a very strong impression in that clip, and it's hard to ignore the impact that he's having on this organization. One team is going all-in for a championship, while the other traded its two best defensive players (defensive tackle Jeffrey Simmons and safety Amani Hooker) and has another getting involved in airport incidents during the bye week. It's easy to see why Jacksonville is attracting money.

Indianapolis has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings, including a 33-8 home win last season. Five of the last six meetings between the Colts and Dolphins have stayed under the total. Indianapolis is looking to snap a five-game losing skid after falling in overtime to Dallas last week. Kicker Spencer Shrader made a pair of 50+ yard field goals in the fourth quarter to force overtime, but the Colts' offense couldn't get anything going in the extra period. Miami is coming off a 19-9 home loss to Detroit. The Dolphins' defense did a fantastic job against one of the league's best offenses, but Malik Willis and Co. couldn't get much going in the passing game. Willis finished 13-of-25 for 128 passing yards with no touchdowns, and he appeared to tweak his groin early in the contest and played through it. Apparently the injury was worse than originally anticipated because the Dolphins placed him on IR on Tuesday. Former Syracuse and Ohio State QB Kyle McCord would be next in line for the Dolphins. McCord hasn't taken a snap in a regular season game during his two years in the NFL. Indianapolis shipped its top two receivers - Keenan Allen and Josh Downs - to the 49ers and Chiefs, respectively. Some early money has shown on the under in this contest, and we agree with it. First-year head coach Jeff Hafley is making chicken salad out of this Dolphins defense. Against a schedule that includes the 49ers, Chiefs, Bengals, Patriots, Lions and Raiders, Miami is "only" allowing 25.0 points per game. Over the last two games against the Patriots and Lions, Detroit has allowed 16 first downs in each game. The wins have been hard to come by, but Hafley has given his team a blueprint to compete each week, and it's working.

Oh, how the Chiefs are going to rue that loss two weeks ago in Denver, which allowed the Broncos to temporarily leapfrog them in the AFC West (thanks to playing one more game, though that will equal out after this weekend). A quick look at upcoming schedules indicates why that result was so potentially damaging for Kansas City, with an upcoming stretch of Bills-Rams-Bengals, all on the road, to be followed by the Patriots and Niners at Arrowhead. Meanwhile, Denver has gotten past the most-dangerous landmines on its slate (including all of the NFC West opponents for this season), with a steady diet of Dolphins, Jets, Raiders twice, and Chargers still to come. In the meantime, these aren't the Chiefs of the early Patrick Mahomes era, with Tyreek Hill stretching the field; now with Kenenth Walker III available in the backfield, the deep ball has almost disappeared completely from the KC arsenal, which they were hoping to address at the trade deadline with some outside speed thanks to the acquisition of former Colts' receiver Josh Downs. Mahomes' lone long pass play in recent weeks was the 73-yard TD pass at Denver on Nov. 1 to RB Emmett Johnson, who had merely slipped out of the backfield and had about 60 yards of open field in front of him when he caught Mahomes' floater. Meanwhile, the Falcons' brief surge after Michael Penix returned to active duty in September has stalled with losses in four of five, but there's a catch, as in the NFC South that merely keeps you in the race (all four teams sit on three wins into this weekend), and the last time the Falcons played in Mercedes Benz they stunned the Niners on October 25, giving San Francisco its first loss of the season. The Chiefs also weren't generating much pass rush this season before facing Geno Smith and the Jets last week (KC's five sacks last Sunday were more than half of its previous total of nine), so the normal course of events this season would suggest Penix should not be under any unusual distress, and Bijan Robinson remains dangerous enough that Steve Spagnuolo has to pay him considerable attention before getting into his usual cat-and-mouse games with Kevin Stefanski. A personnel move of note for Atlanta was the release of place kicker Nick Folk after his troubles in Madrid last week vs. the Bengals, with Jake Moody signed from Baltimore as his replacement. It might come down to a Moody kick, which for the Falcons' sake seems better than entrusting that duty to Folk. Though an effort like the performance vs. the Niners (or the September romp at Green Bay) might be required, it's within Atlanta to do so.

11/10 1:10 PM PST — Patrick Mahomes and Xavier Worthy are both expected to be limited in practice this week. Mahomes dodged a bullet after taking a scary hit to his throwing arm, but with no structural damage, he just needs to get past the overall soreness.

Cleveland was on a four-game winning streak in this AFC matchup before the Texans earned a 45-14 home win over the Browns in the Wild Card round of the 2023-24 playoffs. That was the last time these teams have met. Cleveland is looking to snap a two-game losing skid after falling in overtime at New Orleans last week. Shedeur Sanders connected with tight end Harold Fannin Jr. for the potential game-tying touchdown with one minute remaining, but first-year head coach Todd Monken elected to go for the two-point conversion. Sanders went 19-of-31 for 297 passing yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions, but couldn't find a receiver on that final two-point try as the Browns fell 23-22. Deshaun Watson is expected to start this contest after missing that contest with a concussion. Watson technically cleared protocol in time to play, but after not practicing during the week, the Browns gave the ball to Sanders for a spot start. Houston handled business as a road favorite against the Chargers last week. The Texans were up 38-9 early in the fourth quarter before the lowly Chargers scored a pair of garbage time touchdowns. Houston is 3-1 against the spread over the last month with the lone loss coming in a chin-scratcher as a double-digit home favorite against the Giants. Our power ratings are in line with where this game has opened, but we are interested in laying the points with Houston. We can't help but wonder what the overall perception of the Texans would be right now if they hadn't stubbed their toe against New York. Remember, Houston was playing that game the week after beating division rival Jacksonville in London. Hypothetically, let's say the ball bounces in Houston's direction in overtime and the Texans win that contest instead of the Giants. We'd be talking about a team on a four-game winning streak with a win over red-hot Jacksonville and a pair of 20+ point wins over Los Angeles and Tennessee. That's probably a team that's getting a little more respect in the betting market.

The Saints have won five of the last six meetings, including a pair of outright upsets last year. Carolina is 0-3 straight-up and against the spread over its last three games following last week's 26-21 home loss to Denver. The Panthers have allowed an average of 27.2 points per game over the last five contests. New Orleans is 1-5 against the spread over the last six games, but the Saints did pick up an outright win over Cleveland last week. New Orleans continues to produce terrible offensive numbers in the first half. After a 3-3 first half tie with Cleveland last week, the Saints are now 1-7 against the first half spread this season. New Orleans has only scored in the first quarter two times in eight games, producing a total of nine first quarter points this season. Perhaps the potential return of running back Travis Etienne Jr. is just what the voodoo doctor ordered in the French Quarter. Etienne Jr. has not played since Week 3 against the Raiders, but he is expected to return to practice this week after dealing with a hamstring injury. New Orleans has the second-lowest rushing success rate in the NFL this season (Raiders last), so his potential return would be a big boost for the Saints' offense. Carolina is running out of healthy bodies on defense. A unit that already has five players on IR was missing edge rusher Jaelan Phillips and linebacker Bobby Okereke last week against the Broncos. If New Orleans can't muster some early scoring against this defense, then Kellen Moore needs to tear it all down and start over. Don't forget, owner Gayle Benson has been keeping a closer-than-normal eye on her team in recent weeks and wrote a letter to the Saints' fan base after the loss to Pittsburgh in Paris. Last week's win over Cleveland was a small step in the right direction, but a home win over a division opponent would go a long way toward rebuilding excitement after Who Dat Nation watched their team lose its first three home games this season.

Minnesota has won four of the last five meetings, including a 39-22 home win over the Packers in Week 1. The NFL world was re-introduced to Brian Flores' defense in that contest as his Vikings sacked Jordan Love four times and forced two turnovers. Minnesota won that game by 17 despite getting out-gained by 180 yards. Green Bay is 5-1 straight-up, 6-0 against the spread following last week's dominant 45-27 road win in New England as a 3.5-point 'dog. That high-scoring affair broke a string of five-straight "under" results in Green Bay's games. Packers' running back Josh Jacobs suffered a broken finger in last week's win over the Patriots. Jacobs was only able to produce five yards on four carries against New England. He is expected to miss the next three weeks after undergoing surgery. Kirk Cousins will head back to Minneapolis this week to reunite with the team that he played for from 2018-2023. With the exception of a few chin-scratching interceptions, Cousins did exactly what he was asked in Las Vegas as he completed 64.1-percent of his passes while providing leadership to No. 1 overall pick Fernando Mendoza. The relationship between Cousins and Vikings head coach Kevin O'Connell dates back to 2017 when O'Connell was on the Commanders' coaching staff with Cousins at quarterback. As we go to print on Tuesday, there is no official word that Cousins will get the start this week but it should be pretty safe to assume that will be the case. The Minnesota faithful will likely revolt if they have to watch another Carson Wentz start. While this game certainly isn't high on our list thanks to the unknown of Cousins, we do have some mild interest in Minnesota getting +3.5. Once Flores and the Vikings' defense figured out what Jordan Love and the Packers' offense wanted to do in the opener, they put the clamps down. With Green Bay losing Jacobs, we're not sure the Packers have a reliable change-up if the fastball isn't working.

These former AFC West foes don't cross paths very often any more, but Las Vegas earned a 40-34 road win in overtime in November 2022 in their last meeting. For the seventh-straight week, the Raiders' defense struggled to put up any kind of resistance as Las Vegas fell 38-17 against the 49ers last week. Las Vegas has now tied the modern NFL record by allowing 30+ points in six-straight games. The Raiders' last seven games have seen an average of 59.4 points per game with all seven contests going over the total. Seattle didn't need to do much in last week's 17-3 home win over the Cardinals. The Seahawks' defense held Arizona to 198 total yards and 13 first downs. Seahawks' QB Sam Darnold is not expected to play this week as he recovers from a quad injury. Back-up Drew Lock suffered an oblique injury in Seattle's win over Arizona, but early indications suggest that he will be available for this game. Las Vegas sent starting QB Kirk Cousins in exchange for a third round pick in next year's draft. Former No. 1 overall pick Fernando Mendoza will make his first start this week against the defending champs. It’s scary trusting a rookie QB in his first career start, but we do have some mild interest in the Raiders. The strength of the Seahawks over the last two seasons has been Seattle's rushing defense. Well, Las Vegas has completely abandoned the run. Over the last three games, running back Ashton Jeanty has more receiving targets (19) than rushing attempts (16). Seattle still has a fantastic pass defense that is likely going to give the Raiders some fits, but Las Vegas isn't going to fall into the trap of trying to run on this team. Klint Kubiak was the offensive coordinator for the Seahawks last season, so he should have a pretty good idea of what Lock wants to do and what makes him uncomfortable. Given the unique chess match between two coaching staffs that know each other well, we're intrigued by the head start with the Raiders. If Mendoza lives up to full potential in his debut start, you might not even need the points.

The Rams were on a three-game winning streak in this NFC West matchup before Arizona pulled off an 18-16 stunner as a 13.5-point 'dog on October 18. The Cardinals' defense held the Rams to 286 total yards in that contest and Chad Ryland kicked the walk-off field goal as time expired. Los Angeles has won-and-covered its three games since that loss to Arizona, but things certainly haven't been easy. Rams' star receiver Puka Nacua is expected to miss the next month with injuries to both his knee and toe. Fellow receiver Davante Adams has not played since October 18 as he deals with a hamstring injury. Cardinals' QB Gardner Minshew is undergoing testing for an elbow injury this week. With Jacoby Brissett now in Baltimore, that leaves rookie Carson Beck in line for the potential start this week and possibly the rest of the season. Beck has not taken a regular season snap yet for the Cardinals, and unfortunately for him, Arizona will be without its top playmaker for the rest of the season. Wide receiver Michael Wilson is dealing with a fracture in his neck. The injury actually happened in Week 4, but he's continued to try and play through it over the last few weeks. In the last two against the Cowboys and Seahawks, Wilson caught 14 passes for 171 yards and a touchdown while also producing a 17-yard rushing attempt. Arizona's defense (frankly, whole team) is down to a skeleton crew right now, but we can only look toward the under in this matchup. We wouldn't be shocked at all if the Rams' defense pitched a shut-out in this contest. Myles Garrett was only on the field for 35 snaps last week against the Commanders and he was still able to produce three sacks in his return from IR. In the 23 plays where both Garrett and Aaron Donald were on the field, the Rams produced four sacks. Those numbers are only going to increase as Garrett's snap count increases.
Play the Under

11/10 1:31 PM PST — Rams' wide receiver Puka Nacua is expected to miss the next month with knee and toe injuries, although LA has not made a firm decision to place him on IR.
11/10 1:32 PM PST — Cardinals' QB Gardner Minshew is undergoing testing for an elbow injury this week. With Jacoby Brissett now in Baltimore, that leaves rookie Carson Beck in line for the potential start this week and possibly the rest of the season.

There's been an edge to this rivalry ever since the 1970 merger, really, when in three-successive seasons the Cowboys and Niners would meet in the NFC playoffs, with a Super Bowl berth on the line twice...and Dallas winning all three. Several subsequent meetings have offered even more memorable highlight-reel moments (how about "The Catch" by SF's Dwight Clark in the 1981 NFC title game at Candlestick Park?), and the Niners have been able to exact their revenge a couple of times over from the early 70s. At the current, it's also been advantage San Francisco, with four-straight wins-and-covers over the Cowboys since 2021, including twice in the playoffs, acting as a modern-day Kryptonite for Dallas as the Steelers once were in the later 70s. The Cowboys continue to stay within earshot in the NFC East, but maybe only because the table-topping Giants remain a hard sell with JJ McCarthy at QB, but it's worth noting they're still three games up on the Cowboys in the loss column (NY having played one fewer game), so maybe it's just a Jerry Jones illusion that Dallas is in playoff contention. That the schedule has broken so well for Dallas, with recent wins over troubled Philly and Indy, suggests that the worst they should be sitting at the moment is their current 4-5...not impressive. There are still questions galore about the Dallas defense, which has let Gardner Minshew beat them and a struggling Daniel Jones almost beat them in the past two weeks, after allowing Bucs rookie Jalon Daniels to notch his first NFL win not long ago at Arlington in October. The Niners, then, could be the Cowboys' worst nightmare, refreshed after their recent bye week that allowed some of their wounded (especially in the receiving corps) to make a recovery, and the effort was razor-sharp out of the bye when walloping the Raiders last week in Santa Clara. A new feature for the Kyle Shanahan offense is Indiana rookie RB Kaelon Black, getting his share of carries now with Christian McCaffrey and providing a dynamite 1-2 backfield punch. That's bad news for a soft Dallas rush defense allowing 5.0 yards per carry (third-most in the league), which sets up perfectly for Brock Purdy's schemed passes off of play-action. Though Dak Prescott might pad his fantasy stats in the late going (as is often the case for him when the Cowboys play from behind), we don't see any reason why this result should end up any differently than recent series meetings.

Pittsburgh is 5-2 straight-up, 6-1 against the spread over the last seven meetings in this AFC North matchup. The Steelers earned a 30-27 home win as a 3.5-point home 'dog in Week 3. Running back Jaylen Warren provided Aaron Rodgers with plenty of support as he ran for 127 yards on 17 attempts. Bengals QB Joe Burrow was held (relatively speaking) to 282 passing yards in that contest, but he's averaged 328.6 yards through the air in the five games since. Cincinnati is 4-0 straight-up, 3-1 against the spread following last week's 34-17 win over Atlanta in Madrid. Burrow appears to be in lockstep with his top two receivers, Tee Higgins and Ja'Marr Chase. In that win against the Falcons, Higgins and Chase caught 15 passes from 18 targets with 187 yards and three touchdowns. Pittsburgh is coming off its bye. The Steelers have won-and-covered each of their last four games, all as a favorite. In fact, the last game where Pittsburgh was an underdog was against these Bengals in late-September. The first meeting between these teams featured 57 points, and frankly, it could have seen more, The Steelers and Bengals combined for three turnovers and Pittsburgh went 1-for-3 in the red zone. Burrow, Chase and Higgins have been playing together forever, so there's little reason to believe they won't have their A-game for this one. But it's certainly fair to question how the international travel will affect Cincinnati's defense, which just had to chase Bijan Robinson and Co. around for three hours last week. Cincinnati's defense couldn't generate a sack against Falcons QB Michael Penix, and Tennessee scored 36 points against the Bengals the week prior.

Baltimore has won-and-covered each of the last three meetings in this AFC series, with the last one being a 30-23 road win in Los Angeles in November 2024. Both teams are looking to snap lengthy losing streaks. Baltimore has dropped its last four games and the Ravens have failed to score 14 points in any of those four contests. Since beating the Colts in the season opener, Baltimore has gone 1-7 against the spread. Los Angeles is 0-8 straight-up and against the spread this season following last week's 22-point home loss to Houston. That final result is actually a little flattering for the Chargers considering it was 38-9 in the fourth quarter before the Chargers scored a pair of garbage time touchdowns. Chargers' QB Justin Herbert suffered a finger injury in last week's loss to Houston. With this game being played on Monday, he has an extra day to get ready, but with the Chargers sitting at 0-8 this season, there's not much of a rush to get him back. DJ Uiagalelei would likely get the nod if Herbert is unable to go. Baltimore acquired QB Jacoby Brissett from Arizona last week and the Ravens have already announced him as the starter for this contest. As we go to print on Tuesday, we can only look in Baltimore's direction, especially if Uiagalelei is announced as the starter. Herbert has been really, really bad this season but we didn't see much in Uiagalelei's college career or preseason action to suggest that he can provide a spark of any kind. There are plenty of unknowns on both sides, but we don't want anything to do with a winless Chargers team making a cross-country trip in primetime.
