Team	Odds to Win Division
New York Mets	+130
Atlanta Braves	+140
Philadelphia Phillies	+370
Miami Marlins	+3000
Washington Nationals	+20000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

The NL East was the most competitive division in baseball last year, with the Braves and Mets each finishing with 101 wins, yet the third-place Phillies made the biggest splash by advancing to the World Series. New York has opened as the +130 favorite to capture the division in 2023, followed by Atlanta (+140) and Philadelphia (+370).

The Mets' Opening Day payroll, including luxury tax penalties, is projected to be around $468 million. And that's after letting Jacob deGrom, Chris Bassitt, Taijuan Walker, Seth Lugo, and Trevor Williams walk during the winter. Philadelphia arguably made the biggest offseason acquisition by bringing in All-Star shortstop Trea Turner to help fill the void of Bryce Harper, who is expected to miss the first couple months of the season.

Miami's Sandy Alcántara won the NL Cy Young last season, but the Marlins struggled to produce runs in support of their exciting pitching staff. Miami scored the fewest runs in the National League last year. Washington finished with the worst record in baseball last season (55-107), and oddsmakers are not expecting much of an improvement. At DraftKings, the Nationals' regular season win total has opened at 60.5, which is tied for the lowest projection for the upcoming season.

Atlanta's Matt Olson (+2200) is a strong candidate for NL MVP this season. Now that the shift is gone, some batters will benefit mightily. Olson is one of those guys. He played in every game last season and had 34 home runs, 44 doubles and 148 hits. With his hits, RBI and runs expected to increase this season, Olson is one of the most consistent offensive players on one of the best teams in the National League.

New York's Kodai Senga (+950) is an intriguing prospect for Rookie of the Year. The 30-year-old has been playing professionally in Japan since 2012, so he's hardly a rookie on the international level. Senga is projected to be the No. 4 starter in the Mets' rotation, and if he is able to command his wicked slider, he can make a name for himself immediately on a staff that has a lot of notable pieces to replace.

Key Acquisitions: RHP Justin Verlander, RHP Kodai Senga, LHP Jose Quintana, RHP David Robertson, LHP Brooks Raley, C Omar Narvaez, OF Tommy Pham (re-signed OF Brandon Nimmo, RHP Edwin Diaz, RHP Adam Ottavino)
Key Departures: RHP Jacob deGrom, RHP Chris Bassitt, RHP Taijuan Walker, RHP Seth Lugo, RHP Trevor Williams, C James McCann

Steve Cohen opened his checkbook during the offseason to take the Mets to a higher level after last year's disappointing playoff elimination. Their first notable addition was the signing of last year's AL Cy Young winner, Justin Verlander. Verlander has been absolutely incredible considering his age, and if he's capable of duplicating last season's performance, the Mets will have one of the best rotations in baseball. They also added Kodai Senga, who will be making his MLB debut after dominating Japan's NPB competition.

The Mets' core of Max Scherzer, Justin Verlander, Edwin Diaz, Pete Alonzo and Fransisco Lindor generate a lot of headlines in The Big Apple, but New York has one of the best supporting casts in the league. Jeff McNeil is an animal when it comes to hitting for average. Starling Marte has a consistent bat to go along with his speed. Brandon Nimmo and Mark Canha are everyday performers, and Adam Ottavino adds a fantastic arm out of the bullpen.

The loss of Jacob deGrom and Chris Bassitt will cause a shuffle in the rotation and they've got a very tough NL East to compete with, but I'm expecting a deep postseason run for the Mets this season.

Betting Recommendations:
Over 94.5 Wins (-105) / Max Scherzer Over 12.5 Wins (-115) / Pete Alonzo for NL MVP (+1500)

2023 Atlanta Braves Preview

Key Departures: SS Dansby Swanson, C/DH William Contreras, RHP Kenley Jansen, RHP Jake Odorizzi, LHP Kyle Muller

Despite losing Dansby Swanson, Kenley Jansen, Luke Jackson and Adam Duvall to free agency during the winter, expectations remain high for the Braves heading into 2023. They did acquire a star player from Oakland Athletics for the second-straight season as they added starting catcher Sean Murphy a year after picking up slugger Matt Olson.

The Braves enter the 2023 campaign with the second-best odds of winning the NL East at +140 while the New York Mets are the favorites at +130 odds. While I do believe that Atlanta will hang around with teams like New York and Los Angeles, there isn't much value considering how close these races will be down the stretch.

Instead, we look towards a season-long player prop. Matt Olson made a seamless transition from the AL West to the NL East, and we expect him to surpass his hits total of 144.5 at DraftKings. Olson recorded 148 hits in his debut season in Atlanta, a year removed from logging 153 hits in Oakland. There is plenty of protection in a Braves lineup that includes Austin Riley and Ronald Acuna Jr. Olson could be one of the many sluggers that will benefit from the new no-shift rule as his wOBA was .338 when hitting into a shift compared to .370 mark when he wasn't hitting into one. Olson has already benefited from a couple hits in Spring Training that snuck through the infield, which would not have happened last year. This is an encouraging sign that he could improve on a batting average of .240. Olson will only get more comfortable in his second season in Atlanta, setting him up to clear this total assuming he stays healthy.

Betting Recommendation: Matt Olson Over 144.5 Hits (-115 at DraftKings)

The Phillies got hot at the right time last season and made it to the World Series where they lost to the Houston Astros. Were they the best team out of the National League? As a fan, I can say no, and it showed in the World Series.

After a slow start last year, the firing of manager Joe Girardi proved to be the catalyst to kickstart the season. The team immediately responded to interim manager Rob Thompson, who's been brought back to lead the team again this year.

Philadelphia will be forced to start the season without Bryce Harper, who's expected to miss the first few months after Tommy John surgery. The Phillies are hoping that a major acquisition and a return-to-form from another will help fill that void. All-Star shortstop Trea Turner signed a massive offseason contract to solidify the Phillies' infield defense and provide stability at the top of the batting order. The other missing piece will need to come from Nick Castellanos, who didn't bring much to the table in his debut season. Anything that resembles his production as a member of the Reds will be a welcomed sight at Citizens Bank Ballpark this season.

I believe that the NL East will once again be the best division in baseball and the Phillies are probably slotted into that third seed again, but they shouldn't get off to the poor start that they did last year under Girardi. They won 87 last year and the new schedule means less games against the Mets and Braves.

Betting Recommendation: Phillies Over 88.5 wins (-115 at DraftKings)

We tip our cap to Miami for making some intriguing moves during the offseason, but we can't help but question the timing. The Marlins have largely remained stagnant over the last decade. They waited until they had the defending National League champs, plus two other 101-win teams in their division to make a splash?! We'll see how it works out for them.

The Marlins sent a very strong starting pitcher in Pablo Lopez to Minnesota in exchange for one of the best contact bats in the league over recent years, Luis Arraez. They also added 2B Jean Segura and starting pitcher Johnny Cueto while retaining a large portion of their production from last year. Miami brings back all four of its remaining starting pitchers outside of Lopez and nine of their top-12 offensive players, in terms of games played.

If the Marlins weren't in the NL East, there is no question that I would be looking at a win total wager (or more) for this team. But until they can show that they can compete with the Phillies, Mets and Braves, it's really hard to back them in a meaningful manner.

Attacking Sandy Alcantara's strikeout prop is the best future wager, in my opinion. Alcantara has had consecutive seasons with 200+ strikeouts. With Lopez out of the mix, the reigning Cy Young champ will once again be the unquestioned ace of this staff.

Luis Arraez's hit total of 158.5 is also worth a look. He may not get the 600+ plate appearances that he got last season, but I still think he will secure at least 160 hits in Miami's spacious park.

Betting Recommendation: Sandy Alcantara Over 196.5 K's (-115 at DraftKings)

The Nationals are just three years removed from a World Series title, but looking at their roster now, you'd never think so. The Nationals have gone fully into rebuild mode. They won just 55 games last season and are tied for the lowest win total in the MLB this season.

Unsurprisingly, the Nationals opted to do next-to-nothing this off-season as a rebuilding team. They lost two power hitters in Cruz and Voit, and they added a few players who are on prove-it deals to essentially eat innings for this club.

Washington will rely on rookies and young players this season. They are hoping to see progress from guys like Josiah Gray, Keibert Ruiz, CJ Abrams and Cade Cavalli. The Nationals have other highly-touted prospects, such as James Wood, Elijah Green and Brady House, who may spend some time with the club at the big league level this season.

Simply put, the Nationals are expected to be horrendous and will probably fit that bill. So, what's the best way to attack the Nationals from a betting perspective this season? Based on how good the rest of the NL East is and how bad the Nationals are, taking them under 60.5 wins is a great bet. Once the Nationals traded Soto and went full tank last season on August 2nd, they won 20 games and lost 39. While some of their young players are exciting and should fare better in their second MLB season, it's hard to see this team taking a five-win leap from last season this year.

Betting Recommendation: Nationals Under 60.5 wins (-115 at DraftKings)

2023 NL Central Preview
Prepared by: GoldSheet / wt.buzz/gs / @thegoldsheet

Team	Odds to Win Division
St. Louis Cardinals	-120
Milwaukee Brewers	+160
Chicago Cubs	+650
Pittsburgh Pirates	+4500
Cincinnati Reds	+6000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

The NL Central had just one playoff team last season, the division winner St. Louis Cardinals. The Brewers were in contention for most of the season, but the Cubs, Pirates and Reds were non-competitive for a large chunk of the 2022 season.

St. Louis has a stout roster, and the Cardinals bolstered their lineup and defense by signing Willson Contreras to a 5-year $87.5 million deal from their divisional rival Cubs.

After occupying a playoff spot for much of last season, Milwaukee's year ended last season on a sour note and the Brewers didn't do much to reinstall confidence. Wade Miley, Jesse Winker and Abraham Toro have been brought in, but considering the moves that other teams in the National League made, Milwaukee's offseason was largely uneventful.

The Cubs were in the midst of a rebuild last year, but they got busy this off-season. Contreas, Miley, and Jason Heyward are gone, but Chicago signed Dansby Swanson, Jameson Taillon, Trey Mancini, Cody Bellinger, Michael Fulmer, Eric Hosmer and more, spending over $300 million in contracts in free agency.

The Pirates added some veteran pieces like Rich Hill, Carlos Santana, Austin Hedges and Andrew McCutchen to help their young roster. The Reds are in no position to win now.

If you're looking at the NL Cy Young race, Milwaukee's Corbin Burnes is an intriguing name to watch. After a boisterous offseason, the 2021 winner is very likely to be traded by the Brewers. He has motivation to pitch well because he's entering a contract year. The club has motivation to put him in good spots so that his trade value stays high. All of the pieces are in place for Burnes to have a Cy Young-caliber year. We just don't know if he's going to stay in the NL.

Pittsburgh's Oneil Cruz is a name to keep an eye on as a darkhorse MVP candidate. He displayed plenty of speed and power last season. If his plate discipline improves, he will have plenty of opportunities to pad his stats in hitter-friendly ballparks in the NL Central.

2023 St. Louis Cardinals Preview

2023 Win Total	88.5 (O -115) (U -105)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (-235) No (+195)
Odds to Win the NL Central	-120
Odds to Win the NL Pennant	+800
Odds to Win the World Series	+1800

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: C Willson Contreras (re-signed RHP Adam Wainwright)
Key Departures: C Yadier Molina, DH Albert Pujols, LHP Jose Quintana, OF Corey Dickerson

The St. Louis Cardinals organization is as consistent as they come with the ability to replace legends, sign stars and infuse young talent without missing a beat. The Cardinals aren't as dominant as they were in the 2010's, but have made the postseason four seasons in a row.

The Cardinals biggest losses entering the 2023 season are retirement of veteran cornerstones Albert Pujols and Yadier Molina. St. Louis saw a need and addressed it as they signed catcher Wilson Contreras away from their division rivals the Chicago Cubs. Contreras should provide an offensive boost compared to what Molina could offer late in his career, however he will have to adjust to a new pitching staff.

The Cardinals have a veteran rotation of Adam Wainwright, Jack Flaherty, Jordan Montgomery, Miles Mikolas and Steven Matz. Their biggest strength is an infield that includes the reigning NL MVP Paul Goldschmidt at first and one of the game's best defenders in Nolan Arenado.

The Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds aren't really part of the conversation as they should be battling for fourth and fifth place in the NL Central. The Chicago Cubs have made some tremendous improvements in free agency, but I still have them finishing around .500 and in third place. The Milwaukee Brewers have the best pitching staff in the division, however that lineup can't be trusted until they prove themselves. The Cardinals are also more likely to add key players around the trade deadline in comparison to Milwaukee. St. Louis has the best roster in the NL Central and this is a fair price for the division crown.

Betting Recommendation: St. Louis Cardinals to Win NL Central (-120 at DraftKings)

After making four-straight playoff appearances from 2018-2021,the Brewers did not make the playoffs last season. Even when they were making the postseason, the biggest issue the Brewers faced was their inability to score runs. After another lackluster offensive season last year, the Brewers got to work trying to rebuild their lineup.

The Brewers did not go after any stars, but they were able to lock in a few solid hitters in Abraham Toro, William Contreras, Brian Anderson and Jesse Winker to bolster the lineup. They lost Kolton Wong, a great defensive second basemen, and Hunter Renfroe, a power hitter. Neither of these losses are big losses in my opinion.

The Brewers' strength has been their pitching staff, and there is no reason to believe that this pitching staff will not perform again. However, the Brewers had an arbitration issue with ace and ex Cy Young winner Corbin Burners. In a contract year, it is anticipated that Burners will not end the season on the Brewers' roster.

Still, Milwaukee has the second-best odds to win the NL Central and the Brewers are -110 to make the postseason. The NL Central is weak outside of the Cardinals, so the Brewers certainly have a shot. However, given how good the NL East and the Padres and Dodgers are, there is not enough room for all these great teams to make the postseason.

So, if you are looking to maximize value, take the Brewers to win the NL Central. The path to win the Central is easier than the Wild Card, and it is a plus-money wager.

Betting Recommendation: Brewers to win the NL Central (+160 at DraftKings)

Chicago won 74 games last season and came in third in the NL Central, but the Cubs are looking to have a bounce-back year. Chicago spent over $300 million in contracts this offseason on high-upside players like Danby Swanson, Cody Bellinger, and Trey Mancini. They also attempted to bolster their pitching staff by adding Michael Fulmer and Jameson Taillon.

Losing Willson Contreras was a significant blow for Chicago, and while it is impossible to replace a guy like Contreras, Chicago added Tucker Barnhart to its battery.

The Cubs enter the season with the third-longest odds (+650) to win the NL Central and the ninth-longest odds (+310) to make the NL Playoff picture. While dethroning the NL Central champion Cardinals seems like a lot to ask for this roster, I anticipate the Cubs being able to make the NL Wild Card in 2023.

Adding a true star shortstop in Dansby Swanson and an ex-MVP in Cody Bellinger were significant moves, even if Bellinger has struggled over the past few seasons. However, I am more bullish on Chicago making the postseason because they improved mightily while their divisional rival, the Brewers, stayed pretty stagnant this offseason.

With a new-look lineup and improvement to their pitching staff, there is value in the Cubs to make the playoffs in the NL. It is a crowded field with great teams in the NL East and the NL West, but the Cubs are not as far behind the Cardinals as you may think.

Betting Recommendation: Cubs to Make the Playoffs (+310 at DraftKings)

After winning just 62 games and finishing last in the NL Central last season, the Pirates immediately got to work restructuring their team. While they did a solid job bolstering their pitching staff and their lineup, I am not expecting the Pirates to take much of a leap this season.

Pittsburgh has three young studs in Roansy Contreras, Oneil Cruz and Ke'Bryan Hayes, and these players are the future of this team moving forward. Cruz has shown rare size, speed and power, while Hayes has already established himself as one of the best defensive infielders in the sport.

The Pirates have some prospects that should play amply for them this season. Termarr Johnson is their highest-rated prospect, but he is still in single-A ball. Other prospects to look out for include Endy Rodriguez, Luis Oritz and Quinn Priester.

The Pirates' win total is set at five more than they had last season, and while I am not expecting the Pirates to shock the world this season, I think they will be better than last year. They lost 100 games in back-to-back seasons, but this is also the most exciting this team has been in the past few years.

I do not expect Rich Hill or Andrew McCutchen to turn back the clock and become the studs they once were, but their experience should help this young clubhouse. I think the Pirates are more competitive this year, and I think they win 70 games this season.

Betting Recommendation: Pirates Over 68.5 wins (-105 at DraftKings)

The Cincinnati Reds were considered a darkhorse of kind last season. The Reds had the pieces to be competitive with an outside chance of qualifying for the postseason. Many baseball pundits believed the team could be a part of the September playoff chase. The cynical half of MLB traditionalists understood the Reds organization for who they have been and still were, ownership with a history of entering the spring session with a "wait and see" approach. Wait and see how the baseball bounces before gambling, bidding, or buying player upgrades.

The Reds ended the 2022 season with a 62-100 record. The same roster that owned a preflop season win total of 74.5 (-110) at DraftKings. The Reds traded Kyle Farmer to the Twins this winter for Kevin Newman, not to improve the team but to cut payroll. The team added a pair of catchers in Luke Maile and Curt Casali understanding the depth at catcher would free Tyler Stephenson to swing the bat on days he wasn't behind home plate. Luke Weaver's addition to the roster was a low-risk high-reward move. The front office added Wil Myers on a one-year deal. Cincinnati's half-season trade-deadline blueprint for a player with the skillset of Myers sets up the possibility that hitter-friendly Great American Park could present a flip of Myers for a prospect at the trade deadline.

The 2023 Reds are not in a better spot among division rivals than they were a season ago, yet the season win total is nearly six games higher than the number of games they won in 2022.

Betting Recommendation: Reds Under 65.5 Wins (EV at DraftKings)

2023 NL West Preview
Prepared by: GoldSheet / wt.buzz/gs / @thegoldsheet

Team	Odds to Win Division
Los Angeles Dodgers	-115
San Diego Padres	+120
San Francisco Giants	+1000
Arizona Diamondbacks	+5000
Colorado Rockies	+18000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

The NL West was top-heavy last season with the Dodgers and Padres making the postseason and facing each other in the playoffs.

The Dodgers (-115) are the favorite to win the division again, but the Padres (+120) will undoubtedly put up a fight. Los Angeles is still loaded, but the boys in blue lost Tyler Anderson, Tommy Kahnle, Trea Turner, Craig Kimbrel, Andrew Heaney, Chris Martin, Cody Bellinger and Justin Turner. They made up for it by signing Noah Syndergaard, J.D. Martinez and David Peralta.

San Diego spent $384 million in contracts this offseason in an effort to close the gap with their NL West neighbors. After acquiring Juan Soto in the middle of last season, the Padres acquired Xander Bogaerts, Robert Suarez and Michael Wacha in the offseason and will get Fernando Tatís Jr. back after missing almost all of last season.

Bogaerts opted to head to San Diego in free agency to play alongside other MVP candidates. His 6.1 WAR last season was the best of his career, and he will have support up and down the Padres' lineup.

The Giants (+1000) won the division in 2021, but that seems like forever ago based on the Dodgers' and Padres' moves since then. San Francisco was busy this offseason, signing Mitch Haniger, Michael Conforto, Taylor Rodgers, Sean Maneas, Ross Stripling and others to give themselves a shot to compete this season after losing Carlos Rodon.

Arizona's pitching staff took some promising steps forward last season, and Zac Gallen is an intriguing Cy Young candidate. Gallen finished fifth in voting last season, and could take another step forward this year. He led the National League in WHIP, and his analytic profile fits the mold of a pitcher who could be even better this upcoming season.

The LA Dodgers have won the NL West nine times in the last ten years; a team very accustomed to regular season success. This was a relatively quiet offseason for a squad that has made numerous high-profile signings in recent seasons, and LA did lose a fair bit of offensive talent; albeit injury riddled and often underachieving offensive talent. That said, with Mookie Betts and Freddie Freeman very much in their prime, the current version of the Dodgers lineup is poised to approach or exceed their MLB leading 847 runs scored from 2022 or the 830 runs they plated in 2021.

LA has arguably the deepest pitching rotation in all of baseball; a team that can withstand injuries and attrition as the season progresses far more than most squads. Their starting staff, bullpen and approaching prospects are all positively loaded. And it's surely worth noting that from a scouting perspective, LA is the gold standard in all of baseball – they spend money like drunken sailors, leaving them well-prepared for every opponent they face.

LA won 106 games in 2021 and 111 games last year. Playoff baseball is about swings and misses. Their staff hasn't caused enough of them and their lineup made too many of them.

LA deserves to be one of the World Series favorites, but I don't want my money on them at the short prices being offered. The better bet – even in an improving division – is to look at the Dodgers OVER their win total; a loaded squad that is still very much among the elites in MLB.

Betting Recommendation: Dodgers Over 95.5 Wins (-125 at DraftKings).

San Diego was the star of the show this offseason making multiple acquisitions in the free agency market. Talent-wise, the Padres rank near the top of MLB. How that plays out on the field over a 162 game season is a different question. The meshing of big contracts on a roster can be a tricky proposition, although no denying the ceiling is sky-high in Southern California.

The Padres finished last season a game short of 90 wins at 89-73 and went on an impressive postseason run all the way to the NLCS. This year, the season win total sits at 93.5 and the World Series futures market is priced around 10-to-1 at most books.

Padres' owner and private equity tycoon Peter Seidler did not hold back spending big dollars, signing Xander Boggerts to an 11-year, $280 million dollar contract. Remember, the Padres pulled off one of the biggest trades of the decade by acquiring Juan Soto last season. San Diego will have the most feared quartet of hitters in MLB for 2023. Ha-Seong Kim, who had a .830 OPS for six-straight years in the KBO, enters his age-27 season and should start the year as the Padres' lead-off hitter.

The top of the Padres' rotation looks dominant with Darvish, Musgrove Snell. Bullpen dynamics are always a tough spring training handicap, although Josh Hader in the closer role following Suarez and Garcia makes for a sizzling 7-8-9 inning shut-the-door 'pen setup.

To "bet on" the sexy offseason squad does come with a downside. Usually the public intrigue brings a tax in the betting markets, however the Padres have triple-digit win possibilities in 2023.

Betting Recommendation: Padres Over 93.5 Wins (-105 at DraftKings)

The San Francisco Giants are a much better team than their 81-81 record indicates. They are the unfortunate team in the same division as the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres. The Giants won 107 games in 2021 and fell back down to mediocrity in 2022.

In my eyes, the Giants have the best five-man rotation in all of MLB. That was BEFORE adding to it in the off-season. It is by far the best five-man rotation in MLB now. I have their bullpen ranked about middle-of-the-pack. The Giants' offense is pretty middle-of-the-pack as well, but with their rotation, they do not need to be Superman at the plate.

The Giants added Sean Manaea and Ross Stripling to an already-superb rotation including Logan Webb, Alex Cobb and Alex Wood. They also added Michael Conforto to the mediocre lineup and added a few decent pieces to help the bullpen including Taylor Rogers and Luke Jackson.

The Giants won 81 games last season and over 100 the season before. The Dodgers are great but got hit by free agency a bit which will help the Giants' win total. Adding talent like Stripling and Manaea to the rotation should bolster the win total as well.

Betting Recommendation: Giants Over 81.5 Wins (-105 at DraftKings)

The Diamondbacks have some buzz heading into the 2023 MLB season after developing a crop of young talent. It wouldn't be a shock to see them make a competitive run sooner or later.

The division spotlight has been on the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres for much of the offseason and rightfully so. However, the Diamondbacks made a major deal as they shipped one of the best outfielders in baseball, Daulton Varsho, to the Toronto Blue Jays for outfielder Lourdes Gurriel Jr and former consensus top-25 prospect and catcher Gabriel Moreno. They also signed veteran third baseman Evan Longoria, starting pitcher Zach Davies and relievers Miguel Castro, Scott McGough and Andrew Chafin through free agency.

The D-Backs saw a 22-game improvement in 2022 after finishing the 2021 campaign 52-110. While they do have some great young talent, I'm not expecting another jump this season.

The biggest strength of the 2023 Diamondbacks should come on the right arm of Zac Gallen and the growth of young players like Christian Walker, Gabriel Moreno, Corbin Carroll and Jake McCarthy. Evan Longoria, Ketel Marte and Madison Bumgarner will provide some veteran consistency but it won't be enough. Even with less division games, Arizona still has plenty of action against division rivals that are much stronger than them. The young roster is fueling optimism in the desert after three-straight losing seasons, however, they still have to go through growing pains. I will be backing their win total under.

Betting Recommendation: Diamondbacks Under 74.5 WIns (EV at DraftKings)

2023 Colorado Rockies Preview
Prepared by: WagerTalk's Tokyo Brandon / wt.buzz/tb / @jpbaseballtv

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	65.5 (O -105) (U -115)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (+2500) No (-10000)
Odds to Win the NL West	+18000
Odds to Win the NL Pennant	+20000
Odds to Win the World Series	+40000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: LHP Brent Suter, 3B Nolan Jones, RHP Jose Urena
Key Departures: RHP Alex Colome, OF Sam Hilliard, OF Connor Joe

The Colorado Rockies are an absolute dumpster fire at every position and in the front office. They finished 68-94 last season and frankly, I am not sure how they got that many wins. They have the fourth-worst hitting in MLB, the sixth-worst starting pitching and the seventh-worst bullpen. The Rockies also have the sixth-worst fielding in MLB and a front office that seems to always give away their best players for nothing. Adding to the misery they play in the same division as the Dodgers, Padres and Giants. Poor Charlie Blackmon.

In my eyes, Kris Bryant and Charlie Blackmon are the only Major League-level players in the lineup. The lineup is better than the pitching, so you can guess I am not too optimistic about the pitching either.

I don't believe that Colorado made any improvements during the offseason. The Rockies re-signed some players and signed a few I have never heard of. The ones I have heard of actually should have been cut like starting pitcher Jose Urena, who is expected to be the No. 3 arm in this rotation. Urena has a career 4.80 ERA and a 1.40 WHIP, including a 5.14 ERA and 1.57 WHIP last year. The Rockies also added Connor Seabold to their rotation to be the fourth or fifth starter. His career 10.55 ERA and 2.25 WHIP should be even worse now that he'll be pitching at Coors field. The decent arms are German Marquez and Kyle Freeland, but they are inconsistent and past their prime. I actually like Marquez but with no run support he can not be relied on.

I think the Rockies actually got worse in the off season. How can you put a 10+ ERA guy in your rotation and bat C.J. Cron at clean-up?

Betting Recommendation: Rockies Under 65.5 Wins (-115 at DraftKings)

Juan Soto, San Diego Padres, +550

Juan Soto had a down year last season, but it seems like more of a fluke than anything. Soto will turn 24 during the 2023 season, and the best is still ahead of him. The Padres have the best lineup in baseball, so pitchers cannot pitch around him. Soto's ability to get on base, hit for power, and produce runs and RBIs for potentially the best team in baseball bodes well for his MVP chances.

Mookie Betts, Los Angeles Dodgers, +850

Betts finished last season in fifth place in MVP voting, and it is fair to believe that he will have a better season this year. The Dodgers' lineup is loaded, and Betts is in his prime. Look for him to once again be one of the league leaders in hits and runs produced. Tack on the fact that Betts is a Gold Glove outfielder, and making a case for him to win the award is easy.

Ronald Acuna Jr., Atlanta Braves, +850

Acuna has dealt with injuries through out his MLB career, but when he is at full strength, there are not many players as good as him. Acuna should be the healthiest he's been since 2019, and if he plays an entire season, he should be back to his MVP form. With the changes in the bases, Acuna should be on watch for a 40/40 season

Preseason MLB NL Cy Young Odds

- Sandy Alcantara +450
- Corbin Burnes +550
- Justin Verlander +600
- Max Scherzer +800
- Spencer Strider +950
- Max Fried +1000
- Aaron Nola +1200
- Zach Wheeler +1200
- Zac Gallen +1500
- Brandon Woodruff +1900
- Joe Musgrove +1900
- Julio Urias +2000
- Yu Darvish +2200

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Sandy Alcantara, Miami Marlins, +450

Alcantara was dominant last season and took home the NL Cy Young award. Alcantara started to struggle toward the end of last season, which poses the question of whether last season was a fluke. His 8.0 WAR led all players in the National League last year.

Justin Verlander, New York Mets, +600

Verlander was the prized free agent signing for the Mets this season, and he makes the case for being the best pitcher in the National League. Fresh off an AL Cy Young win last year, Verlander has a new challenge with the Mets in a tough NL East this season. Verlander is an ageless wonder, so it's tough to expect anything but amazing play from him.

Aaron Nola, Philadelphia Phillies, +1200

Nola finished fourth in NL Cy Young voting last season, and you can make the case that he is still improving as a player. Nola's command and velocity make him so tough to hit, and he could be the catalyst for a Phillies team looking to make another deep postseason run.

Clayton Kershaw, Los Angeles Dodgers, +5000

Kershaw is a living legend, and it's tough to ignore his subtle fall from grace as the best pitcher in the National League. Father time seems to be catching up to Kershaw, but that doesn't mean he can't have one more vintage season. In 22 starts last year, Kershaw had a 2.57 FIP, a .942 WHIP and 137 strikeouts. These are still solid numbers, so taking a flyer on one of the best pitchers in recent memory at 50-1 is intriguing.

`

Preseason NL Rookie of the Year Odds

- Corbin Carroll +380
- Jordan Walker +500
- Miguel Vargas +550
- Kodai Senga +950
- Ezequiel Tovar +1100
- Cade Cavalli +1200
- Elly De La Cruz +1500
- Francisco Alvarez +1800
- Brett Baty +1900
- Spencer Steer +2000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Corbin Carroll, Arizona Diamondbacks, +380

Carroll played 34 games with the D-Backs last year and finished with a .260 batting average, 27 hits, four home runs and 14 RBI. He is listed as the No. 2 overall prospect in baseball and already showed signs that he could contribute on the big league level. Given the D-Backs roster, it is anticipated that Caroll will see action early this season.

Miguel Vargas, Los Angeles Dodgers, +550

Vargas played 18 big league games last season, ending with eight hits, one home run, and 13 strikeouts with a .170 batting average. He is the No. 48 overall prospect in baseball and the Dodgers' No. 4 prospect. Vargas is expected to play a lot with the Dodgers this season, but he needs to break out in a major way to justify these odds of him winning this award.

Francisco Alvarez, New York Mets, +1800

Alvarez is the No. 13 overall prospect in baseball, and given the Mets' need for a catcher, expect him to play a lot. Alvarez has immense power, and he can help the Mets immediately.

Elly De La Cruz, Cincinnati Reds, +1500

De La Cruz is the No. 6 overall prospect in baseball, and he should get service time early in the 2023 season. The Reds are rebuilding, so they might as well see what they have in this electric, young shortstop. He has yet to play in a big league game.

2023 AL East Preview
Prepared by: GoldSheet / wt.buzz/gs / @thegoldsheet

Team	Odds to Win Division
New York Yankees	+110
Toronto Blue Jays	+215
Tampa Bay Rays	+380
Boston Red Sox	+1700
Baltimore Orioles	+2200

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

The American League East was arguably the most complete division in baseball last season. The Yankees won 99 games and took home the division, while the Blue Jays (92 wins) and Rays (86 wins) made the AL Wild Card.

However, the two biggest storylines that emerged from the AL East last season was how good the Baltimore Orioles were, and how bad the Boston Red Sox were. The Orioles won 83 games and almost made the playoffs, while the Red Sox finished last in the division with 78 wins, and now have a roster that's void of a lot of talent.

The Yankees got busy in free agency by re-signing AL MVP Aaron Judge, and they bolstered their rotation by adding Carlos Rodon to a six-year $162 million deal. The Blue Jays and Rays both opted to improve their rotations this offseason as well, with Toronto inking Chris Bassitt to a three-year deal and Tampa Bay signing Zach Eflin to a three-year deal. The Blue Jays also made a splash trade for the No. 4 overall prospect in baseball, catcher/OF Daulton Varsho.

The Red Sox, coming off their worst season since 2015, spent over $180 million on free agents but lost Xander Bogaerts to the Padres. Baltimore added a starter in Kyle Gibson and a solid bat in Adam Fraizer, but oddsmakers are not expecting this team to take another significant leap like they did last season.

Tampa Bay's Wander Franco is an intriguing prospect for AL MVP this season. Franco will be 22 at the start of the 2023 campaign and is a prime candidate to grab some headlines. In 83 games last year, Franco had 87 hits, 33 RBI and 46 runs. Barring injury, he is expected to play all season long, and the sky is the limit for what he can do.

Gerrit Cole has been one of the best pitchers in baseball since 2018, but he has yet to win the Cy Young award. Cole and Toronto's Alek Manoah are two of the preseason favorites to capture the award in 2023.

2023 New York Yankees Preview

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	94.5 (O +100) (U -120)

Odds to Win the AL East	+110
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+360
Odds to Win the World Series	+750

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: LHP Carlos Rodon, RHP Tommy Kahnle (re-signed OF Aaron Judge, 1B Anthony Rizzo)
Key Departures: RHP Jameson Taillon, DH Matt Carpenter, OF Andrew Benintendi, LHP Aroldis Chapman

The Yankees are a rare team where expectations include winning a World Series Championship or the season was a failure. The Yankees have not won the World Series since 2009 and the fans are getting restless.

The Yankees added Carlos Rodon to their already-strong rotation. Adding Rodon gives them two legitimate AL Cy Young Candidates in Rodon and Gerrit Cole. The Yankees should see better production from the shortstop and third base spots. Prospect Oswald Peraza could very likely usurp the shortstop spot from Ian Kiner-Falefa before the All-Star break. Kiner-Falefa has proven to be unreliable on defense and his hitting regressed a bit in 2022. Peraza is a true shortstop but also has the versatility to play second base. At 3B Josh Donaldson hit just .222 compared to his career .265 and only hit 15 home runs in 478 at bats. This can only improve.

Giancarlo Stanton seems to always be injured and only hit .211 in 2022. Stanton is a good pure hitter and this can only improve. Aroldis Chapman is gone and the closer role will be improved with Clay Holmes or Jonathan Loaisiga.

I am high on the Yankees this year. They won 99 games last year and should see improvement at shortstop, third base and at closer. With Justin Verlander out of the mix in Houston, I think the Yankees have surpassed the Astros in the American League pecking order.

Betting Recommendations:
Over 94.5 Wins (EV at DraftKings)
Yankees to win the AL East (+110 at DraftKings)
Yankees to win the American League Pennant (+360 at DraftKings)

I'm old enough to remember Toronto coming into the league. While there were a lot of lean years, the Jays steadily improved and built themselves into a contender. They kept getting closer and ultimately won the World Series. Then they did it again.

Those championships came more than 30 years ago, and Toronto is again starving for success. The pieces are certainly in place with a potential MVP candidate in Vladimir Guerrero and a potential Cy Young Award winner in Alek Manoah. Chris Bassitt strengthens the rotation, and the Jays appear to be a little more well-rounded than last year. They may not have quite the power, but they're going to be faster on the basepaths, and a change in management should also help.

I expect the Jays to be playing into October. Despite the Yankees being the clear favorite in the AL East, DraftKings has Toronto at -255 to make the playoffs. Games against New York and Tampa will be competitive. The Jays, Rays, and Yankees should all pick up plenty of cheap wins against the Red Sox and Orioles, as both teams are projected to finish below the .500 mark.

If you're not sold on the Yankees, getting the Jays at +215 to win the East would look pretty appealing. Of course, staying healthy will be key. An early spring training injury to Guerrerro had everyone holding their breath. Thankfully, it doesn't appear to be too serious.

The Jays could also use a bounce-back year from Berrios, who hopes pitching for Puerto Rico in the WBC will help him regain his form. I've got a feeling that things all come together.

Betting Recommendation: Blue Jays Over 91.5 wins (-115 at DraftKings)

The Rays reached the postseason for the fourth-straight season and eighth time in their history in 2022, but nonetheless, finished disappointed on the heels of winning 100 games the year prior. Cleveland swept Tampa Bay out of the playoffs 2-0 in the Wild Card round, marking the first time it failed to win a game in the postseason.

Getting back on track this season hinges on their prized arms healthy and out there performing to their potential every five days. Tyler Glasnow made just two starts late in the season in his return from Tommy John surgery and was counted upon to start Game 2 of the Wild Card round. It's not ideal that he's already sidelined with a strained oblique that will cause him to miss at least a few starts to open the season. Top prospect Shane Baz is set to miss 2023 after Tommy John. On the bright side, ace Shane McClanahan is ramping up nicely and Luis Patino has looked good in his bid to rejoin a rotation likely to feature Jeffrey Springs, Drew Rasmussen and newly-acquired Zach Eflin, who is set to replace Corey Kluber.

The offense will rely on young star infielder Wander Franco and an outfield of Randy Arozarena, Manuel Margot and Jose Siri, who has already been anointed as the starting center fielder after coming over from Houston last August. Kevin Cash makes extensive use of the bullpen but one of his top guys, Andrew Kittredge, was placed on the 60-day injured list in mid-February and is also aiming to return from arm surgery.

Considering how things are starting out and how loaded the AL East is with New York and Toronto returning loaded squads, Baltimore continuing to make strides and Boston looking to bounce back, we'll fade the Rays since it looks like the injury bug is continuing to haunt them.

Betting Recommendation: Rays to Miss the Playoffs (+140 at DraftKings)

Key Departures: SS Xander Bogaerts, RHP Nathan Eovaldi, DH J.D. Martinez, LHP Rich Hill, RHP Michael Wacha, OF Tommy Pham

Since winning the World Series in 2018, the Boston Red have slowly faded into the background in the American League. Two former franchise icons are gone, the front office hasn't communicated a vision and the AL East remains as competitive as ever.

Red Sox Nation was left scratching their heads as they let star shortstop Xander Bogaerts walk on an 11-year, $280 million deal with the San Diego Padres. They lost slugger JD Martinez and starting pitchers Rich Hill and Michael Wacha. The club did extend 26-year-old MVP candidate Rafael Devers for 13 years and $331 million. The Sox also opted to sign Japanese import Masataka Yoshida as well as Kenley Jansen, Corey Kluber, Justin Turner and Adam Duvall. The Red Sox took another blow when it was announced that Trevor Story would miss most, if not all of the season after having surgery on his throwing arm.

There is some value in a sprinkle on Rafael Devers as AL MVP at +2000 odds. For the past two seasons, Devers has averaged 25 home runs and 85 RBI while also hitting for a combined .287 with 160 hits in each season. The argument could be made that Bogaerts leaving Boston increases Devers chances of winning an MVP award as he is the only candidate in town. Devers was on MVP caliber pace in 2022, hitting .324/.379/.384 with 29 doubles and 22 home runs through 87 games before suffering a hamstring injury in late July. He never bounced back and hit .248/.325/.384 with only five long balls the rest of the way. There have been local reports of David Ortiz working with Devers in the off-season and that's music to Red Sox Nations ears. Assuming he stays healthy, +2000 is worth a sprinkle.

Betting Recommendation: Rafael Devers Wins AL MVP (+2000 at DraftKings)

The Baltimore Orioles are heading into the 2023 season with high hopes and even higher expectations after a surprising 2022 campaign where they finished above .500 for the first time since 2016 with 83 wins. Most of last year's team will be returning, though they did make some improvements to the club through free agency.

Once again, they will rely on contributions from their young core of Adley Rutschman, Cedric Mullins, Gunnar Henderson, and Ryan Mountcastle. They did bring in two veteran starting pitchers Kyle Gibson and Cole Irvin to take some pressure off the bullpen. There is also a ton of excitement surrounding 23-year-old rookie starter Grayson Rodriguez.

According to MLB Pipeline, Gunnar Henderson is the No. 1 overall prospect in the MLB. The 21-year-old shortstop hit .259 with four home runs and 18 RBI in 116 at-bats across 34 games. Henderson is the current favorite to win the AL Rookie of the Year award at +225. He will have the advantage over most as Henderson will be the Orioles' starting third baseman on Opening Day.

Henderson can play high-level defense at third base or shortstop, has great plate discipline and the power-and-speed combination to put up 20 home runs and double-digit stolen bases. I considered his teammate Grayson Rodriguez a Rookie of the Year dark horse at +1000, but pitchers and catchers generally don't have enough time to win the award.

Betting Recommendation: Gunnar Henderson AL Rookie of the Year (+225 at DraftKings)

2023 AL Central Preview
Prepared by: GoldSheet / wt.buzz/gs / @thegoldsheet

Team	Odds to Win Division
Cleveland Guardians	+135
Minnesota Twins	+225
Chicago White Sox	+240
Detroit Tigers	+2200
Kansas City Royals	+3000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

The AL Central was the worst American League division last season by a considerable margin. The Guardians, with one of the youngest teams in baseball, won the division and played well in the Divisional Round before losing to the Yankees. Still, no other team posted a record better than .500.

The Guardians' biggest signing was Josh Bell, but as such a young team, Cleveland is expecting their young studs to continue to grow and develop, which based on last season, is a good bet to make.

The White Sox have the most talented roster in the division, and they signed Andrew Benintendi and Mike Clevinger this off-season, but their biggest moves were hiring Pedro Grigol as their manager and losing Jose Abreu in free agency.

The Twins re-signed Carlos Correa to a six-year $200 million deal, and they added catcher Christian Vasquez. The Tigers and the Royals are still rebuilding and are not seen as threats to win the division.

Cleveland's Jose Ramirez had a fantastic 2022 season and finished fourth place in AL MVP voting. It will be hard to surpass Shohei Ohtani at the top of the odds board since he pitches and hits, but Ramirez should be poised for another monster season. Ramirez will rack up more hits without the shift and more RBI as the Guardians have built a good roster around him.

Chicago's Lance Lynn is an intriguing Cy Young candidate. Lynn is coming off a down year where he only made 21 starts, but he finished in the top-six of Cy Young voting in 2019, 2020, and 2021. After some offseason moves, Lynn is poised to regain his position as the ace of the White Sox staff.

2023 Win Total	86.5 (O -120) (U +100)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (-135) No (+115)
Odds to Win the AL Central	+135
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+1100
Odds to Win the World Series	+2200

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: DH Josh Bell, C Mike Zunino
Key Departures: C Austin Hedges, IF Owen Miller

The Guardians walked away with the AL Central crown last season, and while they made limited moves this offseason, they kept a bulk of their production from last season's team. Cleveland did add the likes of Mike Zunino and Josh Bell to the lineup to mesh with their top-five offensive players (in terms of games played) from last season: Ramirez, Rosario, Straw, Kwan, and Gimenez. Cleveland also returned almost all of its pitching production from last year as well.

Cleveland used a lot of guys from their farm system last season, leading to the discovery of Steven Kwan, who has already cracked the top-100 player list in the league for this upcoming season.

Cleveland is currently the favorite to win the AL Central again this season, with their odds currently sitting at +135. While I think that is a quality bet on this team moving forward, especially when you look at the fact that there isn't much of a learning curve for this team this season, I think there are other profitable ways to attack this team.

With Bell and Zunino added to the lineup, Jose Ramirez should receive some better protection in the lineup this season and Ramirez should be poised for another strong year. Steven Kwan has shown that he's capable of setting the table at the top of the order. Ramirez had 125 RBI last season on a team that didn't have a very good offense. Ramirez missed a portion of 2019 with injuries, and as we all know, 2020 was shortened. But in his last three full seasons, he's posted 100+ RBI in all three.

Betting Recommendation: Jose Ramirez Over 103.5 RBI (-115 at DraftKings)

2023 Chicago White Sox Preview

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	83.5 (O +100) (U -120)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (+125) No (-145)
Odds to Win the AL Central	+240
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+1700
Odds to Win the World Series	+3500

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: OF Andrew Benintendi, RHP Mike Clevinger
Key Departures: 1B Jose Abreu, RHP Johnny Cueto, OF AJ Pollock

The White Sox disappointed their dedicated fan base as they did very little to address their offseason needs. They did acquire starting pitcher Mike Clevinger and outfielder Andrew Benintendi, but that was it, other than a few minor-league deals.

On top of that, they lost one of their best sluggers in Jose Abreu, as he, Johnny Cueto, Vince Velasquez, AJ Pollock, Josh Harrison and Danny Mendick all left via free agency. The White Sox also took a major hit when star closer Liam Hendriks announced on January 8th that he was diagnosed with Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

The Pale Hose enter the season as the third team in the AL Central pecking order at +240. The White Sox regular season wins number seems incredibly sharp at 83.5, so I will be looking for some big +550 odds on the AL Central Straight Trifecta of Cleveland to finish first, Minnesota to finish second, and the White Sox to finish third.

It seems as though Chicago has taken a minor step back, while the Cleveland Guardians have a clear path to retake the division crown, and the Minnesota Twins have made some improvements. The Kansas City Royals and Detroit Tigers will surely be battling for fourth in this division, opening the door for this trifecta.

The White Sox farm system won't be enough to fill gaps around the losses of Abreu, Cueto, Hendricks, and others. The Guardians have hands-down the best pitching in the Central while adding Josh Bell and Mike Zunino and not losing any players of note. The Twins did lose batting champ Luis Arraez but added Pablo Lopez, Tyler Mahle, Christian Vazquez, and Joey Gallo.

Betting Recommendation: AL Central Straight Trifecta 1st CLE / 2nd MIN / 3rd CWS (+550 at DraftKings)

2023 Minnesota Twins Preview
Prepared by: WagerTalk's Tony Finn / wt.buzz/tf / @finnatwagertalk

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	83.5 (O -110) (U -110)

Odds to Win the AL Central	+225
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+1800

Key Departures: IF Luis Arraez, 3B Gio Urshela, RHP Dylan Bundy

The Minnesota Twins fell short of the pundits' 2022 projections winning 78 games en route to a third-place finish in the AL Central. The Twins sat atop the division at the All-Star break with a 50–44 record and the club's 2022 future to win the AL Central (+525) appeared to be gold in mid-August when the team held first place with a 62-55 mark. What followed was an injury-riddled 16-29 finish beginning in late August to the end of the regular season.

Minnesota led the AL Central for the first half of the summer, but the September collapse led by a multitude of injuries ended a promising start. The team's second-half injuries resulted in the development of their youth like Jhoan Duran, Royce Lewis and Jose Miranda.

The blizzard that was Minnesota's off-season has warmed and the organization made more improvements to the roster than any of the other divisional foes. Re-signing Carlos Correa, bringing in Christian Vazquez to handle the pitching staff, upgrading the rotation by trading for Pablo Lopez and committing to franchise youth in the middle infield justifies the trade of Luis Arraez.

The Twins have tremendous depth throughout the roster and the veterans have been vocal about the team's high expectations. A favorable bounce or two this summer combined with a healthy Byron Buxton results in this Twins troupe earning the Junior Circuit Central title in easily the softest division in the league.

Betting Recommendation: Twins to Win the AL Central (+225 at DraftKings)

2023 Detroit Tigers Preview
Prepared by: WagerTalk's Tony Finn / wt.buzz/tf / @finnatwagertalk

Key Acquisitions: RHP Michael Lorenzen, LHP Matthew Boyd, OF Matt Vierling, UT Nick Maton
Key Departures: LHP Gregory Soto, RHP Joe Jimenez, C Tucker Barnhart

The Detroit Tigers won 66 games last season, one more than the Royals to finish fourth in the division. A successful 2023 won't be measured by wins and losses. The season's final grade will represent the growth of the team's young players.

The future faces of the franchise include center fielder Riley Greene, Spencer Torkelson and pitchers in the system with the skillset of Tarik Skubal. The leadership and baseball experiences provided by veterans Javier Báez and Austin Meadows this season matter. Scott Harris, the team's new president of baseball operations, spoke with the media at his December hiring and all but admitted that under his leadership the franchise would be tanking, without actually saying the word.

DraftKings' odds for the Tigers to earn the 2023 AL Central crown were +2200 at the time this MLB betting preview went to press. In my opinion, the true odds for this current group to play their way to the top of the Central should have another zero at the end.

The Tigers traded LHP Gregory Soto and 2B Kody Clemens to Philadelphia in exchange for OF Matt Vierling, SS Nick Maton, and C Donny Sands to add proven production. It's reasonable the front office would like Michael Lorenzen and Matthew Boyd to pitch their way into trade deadline flips. Harris signed two free agents the entire offseason and both were starting pitchers. The optic that the organization didn't ink a single position offers evidence of the organizations' commitment to the rebuild. The 2022 Detroit Tigers had one of the worst offenses in franchise history.

Betting Recommendation: Tigers Under 70.5 Wins (-120 at DraftKings)

Kansas City earned 65 wins last season as the Oakland Athletics were the only American League club to have fewer victories than the Royals. The 2015 World Series champion Royals have not had a winning season since their 95-67 championship season.

The 2023 outlook for the Royals is much the same as that of division rival Detroit with the Royals and Tigers rebuilding and doing so with homegrown talent. The 2023 Royals' Opening Day lineup will likely have only one free agent playing the field. That free agent was an international signing. The future faces will define who the Royals are and what the new front office orchestrated after nearly a decade without a winning season. That list of baseball talent is topped by Bobby Witt Jr. and followed by the likes of Drew Waters, Vinnie Pasquantino and MJ Melendez.

If you removed Brady Singer from the projected 2023 rotation it is possible that this Royals rotation might not have 30 wins between them. The homegrown future in terms of pitching for the Royals is bleak. Kansas City can thank the baseball Gods or the rule changes that have been put in place this season that devalue pitching and assist even the least talented batting orders in the league.

Most sports books offer some form of alternate win total bet, so shop around for this one or something similar. DraftKings offers "Season Win Total Bands" and +425 is an attractive price for the Royals to have less than 61 regular season wins in 2023.

Betting Recommendation: Royals Under 61 Wins (+425 at DraftKings)

2023 AL West Preview
Prepared by: GoldSheet / wt.buzz/gs / @thegoldsheet

Team	Odds to Win Division
Houston Astros	-180
Seattle Mariners	+310
Texas Rangers	+850
Los Angeles Angels	+850
Oakland Athletics	+20000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Despite having the World Series champion Astros and a Wild Card team in the Mariners, the AL West was one of the least competitive divisions in all of baseball. The Angles, Rangers and Athletics were all well below .500 and never had a chance to make a push for the division title.

The Astros (-180) are the favorites to repeat as division champs, while the Mariners (+310) have the most realistic chance of any team in the division to knock them off. The Astros signed Jose Abreu from the White Sox and retained Rafael Montero and Michael Brantley.

Coming off its first playoff appearance and series win since 2001, Seattle was relatively quiet in free agency, but they made trades for Kolten Wong and Teoscar Hernandez to strengthen their team.

The Angles (+850) have two of the best players in all of baseball, but they still are not seen as a threat to win the division. Los Angeles got busy this off-season, signing Tyler Anderson, Brandon Drury, Carlos Esteves and Matt Moore and made trades for Gio Urshela and Hunter Renfroe.

The Rangers (+850) have the same odds to win the division as the Angels, and they made one of the biggest signings of the off-season by inking Jacob deGrom to a five-year, $185 million contract. They also signed pitchers Andrew Heaney, Nathan Eovaldi and Martin Perez.

The Athletics (+20000) are tied for the longest odds of any team to win its division in 2023, and it is not hard to see why. Oakland won just 60 games last season; their projected win total for this year is 60.5, which is tied for the lowest in the MLB. The A's spent $34 million this offseason on four players after trading away C Sean Murphy to the Braves.

With Justin Verlander off to the Mets, keep an eye on Framber Valdez as a Cy Young candidate. Valdez had an incredible 2022 season, and he finished fifth in Cy Young voting and 20th in MVP voting. He pitched three complete games last season and led the AL in innings pitched.

2023 Houston Astros Preview

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	95.5 (O -115) (U -105)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (-750) No (+550)
Odds to Win the AL West	-180
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+310
Odds to Win the World Series	+600

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: 1B Jose Abreu (re-signed OF Michael Brantley and RHP Rafael Montero)
Key Departures: RHP Justin Verlander, 1B Yuli Gurriel, UT Aledmys Diaz, 1B Trey Mancini

Repeating as a champion can be especially tough in Major League Baseball, but the Houston Astros are built for another run. The Astros have been to the World Series in 2017, 2019, 2021 and 2022. They were winners on the bookend of those trips. Houston won an American League-best 106 games en route to winning the championship in six games over the Phillies.

The Astros signed former White Sox first baseman Jose Abreu to a three-year deal less than a month after winning their second championship in six seasons. The former MVP has consistently been one of the top run producers in the game. Houston moved on from ace Justin Verlander, first baseman Trey Mancini and catchers Christian Vazquez and Jason Castro.

The pitching staff could be considered the Astros' strength with young top-30 starters like Framber Valdez and Cristian Javier and lock-down relievers like Ryan Pressly and Rafael Montero. However, this lineup is an absolute juggernaut with Abreu joining the likes of Jose Altuve, Yordan Alvarez, Kyle Tucker and Alex Bregman.

In the AL West, the Seattle Mariners and Texas Rangers have made some nice additions but it won't be enough to close the 16-game gap Houston won the division by last season. This team is loaded top to bottom and they are the odds on favorite to win it all. The Astros won 106 games last season so they could take a serious step back and still clear their team total of 95.5. Give me the over!!

Betting Recommendation: Astros' Regular Season Wins Over 95.5 (-115 at DraftKings)

2023 Seattle Mariners Preview
Prepared by: Sportsmemo's JM Sports / sm.buzz/jms / @jmsportscle

Full Season Bets	Odds
2023 Win Total	87.5 (O -115) (U -105)
Odds to Make the Playoffs	Yes (-165) No (+135)
Odds to Win the AL West	+310
Odds to Win the AL Pennant	+850
Odds to Win the World Series	+1800

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Key Acquisitions: OF Teoscar Hernandez, 2B Kolten Wong, OF AJ Pollock, IF Tommy La Stella, RHP Trevor Gott, OF/C Cooper Hummel
Key Departures: OF Mitch Haniger, RHP Erik Swanson, 2B Adam Frazier, OF Jesse Winker, DH Carlos Santana, IF Abraham Toro

Seattle has gone over its season win total for three-straight seasons now, but this year that total increased again to 87.5 wins on DraftKings. They lost a few offensive pieces as Adam Frazier went to Baltimore, plus Jesse Winker and Abraham Toro were shipped off to Milwaukee, which could hurt the offensive production. Although, in that trade with Milwaukee, Seattle picked up Kolten Wong, who can replace Frazier in the middle infield.

Seattle bolstered its outfield, giving Julio Rodriguez a little more support with AJ Pollock (CWS), Teoscar Hernandez (TOR) and Cooper Hummel (ARZ). They added another bat in the form of Tommy La Stella, plus a couple pitchers to add to their quality pitching staff. For the rotation, they didn't need to add much, they returned nearly all of their starts from last season, as well as their top four relievers.

Seattle is -165 to make the playoffs, but DraftKings is offering "Two AL West teams will make the playoffs" at -120. If you believe the Astros will repeat their success, that's an affordable way to save some juice on the Mariners making the postseason once again.

Julio Rodriguez played 132 games last season, out of 167 possible games, and still managed to accumulate 75 RBI. After some time on the injured list last season, Rodriguez is back for a potential full season. He will also look to benefit from the offensive help of Pollock, Wong, Hernandez, Hummel and La Stella, who could all give him more opportunities with runners in scoring position.

Betting Recommendation: Julio Rodriguez Over 85.5 RBI (-115 at DraftKings)

Texas won a mere 68 games a season ago and the fact that they were only six games from losing 100 seems surreal. The Rangers dominated the headlines prior to Major League Baseball's lockout, spending $561.2 million in free-agent signings. Corey Seager, Marcus Semien, Nathaniel Lowe, as well as Adolis Garcia, didn't carry the rest of the 24-man roster, however, the 2023 Texas outfit figures to win more than they lose.

That statement is a leap considering what they accomplished last season. The rebirth of LHP Martín Pérez was refreshing. Perez will be asked to rinse and repeat his work of a year ago if the Rangers are to make a 14-win leap from last season's 68-94 fourth-place finish. DraftKings' season win total suggests that Texas will be in the mix for one of the American League's Wild Card slots.

The organization carried their American Express with them this winter and used it when the feeling of spending millions presented itself. The Rangers engineered a makeover of their starting rotation, signing Jacob deGrom, Andrew Heaney and Nathan Eovaldi to free-agent deals. The offseason also found the Rangers trading for Jake Odorizzi.

The money the team has spent to position the team as a postseason contender hasn't produced in the fashion nearly a billion dollars in upgrades were expected to. The 2023 offensive will need a big season from former first-rounder and top prospect Josh Jung and the bullpen must outperform their MLB season averages if the Rangers are to challenge the Astros in the AL West.

Betting Recommendation: Rangers Over 82.5 Wins (-105 at DraftKings)

The Angels are a team that exemplifies the saying "You can never have enough pitching." The Angels have arguably the best player in the game with Mike Trout, and the only two-way player to perform like he does since Babe Ruth in Shohei Ohtani. They were a bad team overall due to their poor pitching. The Angels had the seventh-worst bullpen in all of baseball while their starting rotation was middle-of-the-pack.

The Angels added a lot of depth to their position player roster and also added Tyler Anderson and Matt Moore to the pitching roster. Although not really dynamic, these additions such as Gio Urshela, Brandon Drury and Hunter Renfroe should help improve the 73-89 record from 2022. The Angels also should have more of Superman Mike Trout, who spent a ton of time on sidelines by injury in 2022.

With solid additions to both hitting and pitching, along with the assumed more games played by Mike Trout, the Angels should easily be able to top 2022 by more than 8 games. The bullpen is the worry.

The American League MVP race feels like a three-man battle once again between Aaron Judge, Mike Trout and Ohtani. Judge got the honors last year, but I doubt he puts up the same numbers in 2023, which will open the door for the Angels' pair of stars.

Betting Recommendations:
Angels Over 81.5 Wins (-120 at DraftKings)
Shohei Ohtani (+200) and/or Mike Trout (+450) for American League MVP

The Oakland A's lost more games than any team in the American League last season. They closed the regular season slate with a 60-104 record. Just when we thought that the Athletics front office had torn up the blueprints to a roster plan and started from scratch, they surprise us with a second engineering design in a second consecutive season. The projected Opening Day roster has only three players from the organization's 2020 postseason qualifying team, Tony Kemp, Seth Brown, and Ramon Laureano. Top prospects, former and current, are not safe from being shipped or sold in a moment's notice. One-time pitching prospect A.J. Puk was traded to the Miami Marlins in early February for outfielder JJ Bleday. The A's don't have a starting pitcher that is guaranteed a spot in the rotation. The A's are currently auditioning nine pitchers in camp for the five starting slots. GM David Forst announced the signing of Japanese fireballer Shintaro Fujinami stating he would be a part of this season's rotation. If you blinked, you will now find the coaching staff questioning Fujinami's ability to command his arsenal. The A's improved their roster this offseason even with the Sean Murphy trade not returning immediate dividends. In return for Murphy, the A's received four prospects in catcher Shea Langeliers, outfielder Cristian Pache and right-handed pitchers Ryan Cusick and Joey Estes. Oakland may have tweaked their rebuild plan but the organization's focus is still crystal clear. With medication to assist in remaining focused and blinkers on the A's are willing to pay now with the belief returns are 10-fold in the future. With the A's paying now for a brighter future a Recommended Flyer is a Regular Season Wins Bank of 51 or Fewer Season Wins with a return of +500 (DraftKings)

Preseason AL MVP Odds

- Shohei Ohtani +200
- Aaron Judge +450
- Mike Trout +450
- Julio Rodriquez +700
- Yordan Alverez +1100
- Vlad Guerrero Jr. +1200
- Jose Ramirez +1500
- Rafael Devers +2000
- Corey Seager +2000
- Kyle Tucker +2500
- Wander Franco +2500
- Adley Rutschman +2500
- Byron Buxton +3000

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Shohei Ohtani, Los Angeles Angels, +200

As the only MLB player that can pitch and hit, it is obvious why Ohtani is the favorite to win the award. What's not so obvious is exactly how amazing he is at both. Ohtani had a 142 wRC+, a 3.8 WAR, and 34 home runs at the dish last season. On the rubber, Ohtani had a 5.6 WAR, a 2.40 FIP, and an 11.87 K/9. These numbers put him among the best hitters and pitchers in the sport, and he does both exceptionally well.

Aaron Judge, New York Yankees, +450

Aaron Judge put together a historic year last season and took home his first AL MVP award. While regression seems inevitable, what Judge did last season was no fluke. His 11.4 WAR was No. 1 in the MLB, and even if that declines by three points, he would still lead the MLB. With no shift, Judge can actually pile up more hits. He should be in store for another MVP-caliber year.

Mike Trout, Los Angeles Angels, +450

Mike Trout is the best baseball player of the last decade, but injuries have been taking their toll on him the past couple of seasons. When Trout is healthy, he's as good as it gets. However, at 31 years old with back-to-back injury-plagued seasons, Trout's MVP campaign is up to how his body can hold up.

Jose Abreu, Houston Astros, +7000

The Astros signed Abreu to a free agent deal this off-season, and Abreu can make a splash on his new team. He finished last season with just 183 hits, 40 doubles and 75 RBI. However, he won the award in the Covid-shortened 2022 season and has finished with MVP votes in all but two years of his career.

Preseason AL Cy Young Odds

- Shane McClanahan +1200
- Framber Valdez +1500
- Kevin Gausman +1600
- Robbie Ray +1600
- Luis Castillo +1700
- Logan Gilbert +1800

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Jacob deGrom, Texas Rangers, +550

Jacob deGrom, when healthy, is the best pitcher in baseball. He already has two Cy Young Awards under his belt, but his last three seasons have been littered with injuries. If deGrom can start 25+ games, he will always be in the conversation for Cy Young. However, injuries have already reared its head this off-season, so deGrom is a tough player to gauge.

Alek Manoah, Toronto Blue Jays, +800

Last year was Manoah's first full season in the Majors, and he was spectacular for most of the season. However, he fell off toward the end of last year as hitters got more comfortable with his stuff. Manoah certainly has a bright future, but I need to see more of him to justify him having the third shortest odds to win the AL Cy Young.

Triston McKenzie, Cleveland Guardians, +3000

McKenzie's talent has always been incredible, but he took a major leap forward last year. In his 30 starts, he had a 3.59 FIP, a .951 WHIP, and a 129 ERA+.

Odds via DraftKings Sportsbook as of Monday, March 13

Gunnar Henderson, Baltimore Orioles, +225

Henderson is the No. 1 prospect in baseball, so it's no surprise to see him have the shortest odds to win the AL Rookie of the Year. In 34 games last season, Henderson had a .259 batting average, four home runs, 30 hits, and a .788 OPS. He is expected to play for this Orioles team early and often.

Masataka Yoshida, Boston Red Sox, +600

Yoshida is 29 years old and has played professionally in Japan since 2016. Yoshida is expected to make the Red Sox roster right away and add a lefty bat to the Red Sox lineup. In 762 games in Japan's Nippon Professional Baseball, he batted .327 with a .539 slugging percentage and was a two-time batting champion.

Royce Lewis, Minnesota Twins, +800

Lewis played 12 games last season, and he had 12 hits, two home runs, and five RBIs. He is the No. 55 prospect in baseball, but he is poised to make a splash this season. Lewis has dealt with injuries in his minor-league career, but he has all the tools to have a solid big-league career.

D-Eff per baseball-reference.com : "Percentage of balls in play converted into outs. This is an estimate based on team defensive and pitching stats. We utilize two estimates of plays made. One using innings pitched, strikeouts, double plays and outfield assists. And the other with batters faced, strikeouts, hits allowed, walks allowed, HBP, and .71 * errors committed (avg. percent of errors that result in an ROE). Total plays available are plays made + hits allowed - home runs + error committed estimate."
